WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY OWEN M. WILSON, JR.

Calm and peacefully, as the fire from ardata,
He slumber'd on amid the dungeon's gloom;
Life was a blank—he knew not that the morrow's
Last lingering rays would gild a felon's doom!
He dreamed of home and of the days of childhood again,
Guileless and gay—a widow'd mother's joy—
He saw her smile and felt her passionate kiss,
And heard her blessing on her "dark-eyed boy."

Again his footsteps trod the village lane
Beyond the bridge that spann'd the purling stream,
Where oft of yore his boyish fancy led him
To watch the twilight's purple shadows gleam;
And where beyond the forest dark uplifting
Its waving tresses 'mid the summer's blaze,
Beneath whose shade the merry children wiled,
In childish sport he "woo'd the fair Ateen."
He slept, yet on his haggard brow
Anon dark shadows threw sad painfully;
For memory of late years, of misery and sorrow,
In frenzied fury throng'd upon his soul.

The scene swift changed—and in his dreams he saw
A yawning chasm spreading dark and wide,
Where heaven's gates of pearl and amethyst and gold
Gleam'd nobly pure upon the distant sky.
Dark forms clothed in garments of blood-red hue
He felt their hot breath, saw their wild eyes gleam,
A stifled moan welled from his livid lips,
And—he awoke from that soul-harrowing dream.

"What ho! help—they come, they come,
Fiends incarnate from the shades of hell—
Help, I say!"—But the echo alone replied,
As it smote against the grim walls of his cell.

"Ha! what's this? What face and form is here?
Oh God, 'tis she, my mother, sainted one;
Say, art thou come in this dread hour of mine
To chide thy erring, wayward, guilty son?

"Speak, if spirit lips have language, speak;
For then art with me; aye, I feel and see
Thy soothing touch, thy smile and look of pride,
That once was all that life held dear for me.

"Leave me not yet, thou spirit pure and holy,
Oh leave me not so cold and lonely here—
What! art gone? My sight grows dim—'tis dark—
Ha! what's this drops warm upon my hand—a tear?"

He paused—his face grew ghastly white,
As eagerly he strain'd his ever list'ning ear,
While far off the mournful echoes roll'd,
Where a bell now tolled rang out soft and clear.

"But one short hour," in hollow whispers came,
As he strove to peer amid the waning gloom;
"But one short hour—and I, oh God, and I—
Shall see beyond the scaffold and the tomb.

"A curse—let doomed on the hand
That forg'd these fetters. Were it not for ye,
Ere the hour had flown that heralds my doom
The triumph mine—aye—either dead or free."

His voice grew hushed—the frenzy passed away—
Unheed were the solemn notes that roll'd
Upon the still air of the breaking dawn,
As the prison bell its mournful requiem toll'd.

THE STAGE BOX MYSTERY; OR,
THE TREACHEROUS RIVAL.

The last act of "Lucia di Lammermoor" was over, and Gerald Armington had folded the rich opera cloak about his fair bride elect, and was leading her from the dress circle, when her white-gloved hand tightened its clasp of his arm, and a shudder crept over her frame, while her face grew marble pale.

"Pray what is the matter?" asked her companion; "you look really ill!"

"Perhaps you will deem me foolish," replied the lady, "but I have just encountered the gaze of a pair of eyes which have been watching me from the stage-box for the last hour," and now her voice died away in a hoarse whisper.

"Indeed, dearest Isadore, 'tis no unusual thing for you to be watched wherever you appear in public. I should be jealous at seeing so many lorgnettes leveled at you, did I not have the strongest faith in your love."

Isadore shook her head dissentingly, exclaiming:

"No, no, Gerald; this is not a mere admirer. That pair of eyes seemed to burn like live coals; there was something terrible in their glance."

"They may belong to some discarded lover," suggested Armington.

"No, I am sure I never, never saw them before," replied Isadore.

"Then," resumed Gerald, "it must be some actor or the manager himself, who, from his seat in the stage-box espied you, and paid homage to your beauty; you are still weak from your recent illness, and your imagination transformed a stranger into your evil genius. Banish your fears, dear Isadore, for I am certain they are without foundation."

As he spoke he clasped her hand and drew her along, but he too glanced at the stage-box; it was shrouded in gloom, and Isadore could have told him, had he mentioned the fact, that it had been so all the evening. The subject was not resumed during the drive home, though Isadore fancied she caught a glimpse of those baleful eyes as she entered the carriage, and when Armington had gone, and she sought her pillow, they made her dreams hideous.

The next morning, when she went into her boudoir, she found a head of bouquets upon the mosaic table. Among the mass of brilliant bloom she quickly singled out Armington's, both for the exquisite taste with which it was arranged and the love the flowers breathed; but as she lifted it she perceived beneath it a withered bunch of geranium. With trembling fingers she grasped it, and drew forth a note, round which a bit of faded ribbon had been knotted; unfolding the paper, she read as follows:—

"Isadore Leland:—I saw you last night at the opera. I watched you long and earnestly. You love Gerald Armington—you have pronounced your marriage vows. Break your troth to him, for if you become his wife your heart will wither like these flowers. An unknown friend warns you."

The note dropped from Isadore's nerveless grasp; a sharp cry broke from her pale lips, and she sank down upon the gorgeous carpet, sobbing like a child. Alas, her trial hour had come! She could see, through the windows, the bright spring sky, the waving foliage, and the throngs of gay people in the park. Around her was a perfect bower of beauty, but she heeded naught save her own grief. Her nature was extremely sensitive, and the arrow couched in that note had struck home. She recalled the mysterious watcher ensconced in the stage-box; her terror increased as she pondered on her fears, till the curtain had fallen; she remembered with a keen pang Armington's attempts to divert her mind from dwelling on the subject, and thought in bitterness of soul of his treachery.

"Ah, Gerald," she muttered, "you are crafty; you can put on the semblance of truth and honor, and you have deceived me for awhile, but I am no longer your dupe."

She sprang from the floor and paced the room in her wild unrest, till her eyes flamed and her pallid cheek glowed with fever heat.

"It will be like rending soul and body asunder to give him up," she continued, a vein of pathos softening the stormy music of her voice; "I loved him as no woman ever loved before—as I can never love again; but I shall teach myself to forget. He shall not gloat over me."

Once more she paused, and remained for a full hour in deep thought. Then she said:—

"I will do nothing rashly—I will wait a month. The first day of June shall decide my destiny. If so I hope, the note should prove to be a mere fabrication. I will never tell him that I received it. If I can be satisfied beyond a doubt that he is false I will ask for release from my engagement. Till the decisive hour comes I will try and appear the same."

With these words she moved into her dressing-room, bathed her swollen eyes and re-arranged her disordered hair. Excitement lent a glow to her cheek and a light to her eye; and Armington thought he had never seen her more beautiful than when he met her in the boudoir, from which the withered bouquet had been removed.

"Good morning," he said, gaily. "I am rejoiced to see that you have quite recovered from the shock which your nerves received last night at the opera. Though I endeavored to soothe your fears, I could not help feeling anxious myself."

Isadore forced a laugh and rejoined:—

"Oh, the sad fate of 'The Bride of Lammermoor' had given me a fit of the vapors, and I was prepared to deem the person watching me from the stage box a foe. I trust you will not love me less because I am weak sometimes."

"No, no; I watched outside your window two or three hours, but, as I did not perceive your shadow flitting to and fro, my sad face at the window, I concluded that you had forgotten your dread in sleep, and I retired to my bachelor establishment to dream of the day when Isadore shall reign queen of my home, as she does of my heart."

With a lover's tenderness he drew her towards him and kissed her pure white brow, her flushed cheek, her tremulous lip.

"I have a favor to ask," he murmured. "What do you think it is?"

"Oh, you wish me to play a game of chess, or practise that duet from 'Norma,' or take a gallop in the park."

"No, 'tis none of those."

"Pray do not keep me in suspense, I am dying of wonder."

"Well, I want you to go over to Grosvenor square with me, and visit your future home; you have never seen it yet."

"I was attacked with a fever a few days after we were engaged. I should have gone ere this had it not been for my illness."

"I know it, love, but it is quite as well now. Will you come?"

Isadore was in no mood for the visit, but as she had resolved to keep the receipt of the note a secret she dared not refuse. A few moments later she was seated in Armington's splendid carriage, and was dashing towards Grosvenor square. She was leaning back against the luxurious cushions when she gave a sudden start.

There, at the street crossing, stood a female figure, but every trace of her countenance concealed in a coarse hooded cloak, save a pair of dark eyes—the same eyes whose glances had burned into Isadore's soul in the opera house the evening previous—while one hand clutched a bunch of withered flowers, precisely like those the lady had found in her boudoir. Armington perceived her, and carelessly tossed her a coin. She did not stoop to pick it up, but, raising her arm with a vehement gesture, shrieked—

"You are rich, you ride in your fine chariot, while I drag along, tired, hungry, and footsore! I will have gold or nothing, Gerald Armington!"

Every word stung Isadore to the quick, but her companion neither colored nor trembled. He only gave a careless laugh and said:—

"How impudent these beggars grow!"

The carriage whirled on, and the horses were reined up in front of a stately mansion. A liveried porter flung the hall door wide open, and Isadore found herself treading the gorgeous carpets, and gazing at the splendid mirrors, drapery, lounges, marbles, paintings, and bijouterie, which made Gerald Armington's home like a scene of the Arabian Nights.

But those haunting eyes looked down from the Venetian mirrors, peered from every niche, and even gleamed amid the spray of mimic fountains, and the conviction forced itself upon her that her betrothed husband must be hardened in sin if he could meet one who was in some mysterious way linked with his destiny and pass her with such unconcern. She returned to her own home in no enviable mood, and during the silent watches of the night brooded over the first great sorrow of her life.

Weeks dragged by, and every morning, among the flowers sent her, Isadore Leland found a faded bouquet. Wherever she went she was sure to meet the gaze of those dark, burning eyes, and see that shrouded, black figure, lurking about.

She never again espied the haunting eyes in the stage-box, but at the opera she was sure to find them somewhere in the house. Thus a month wore on, and on the last night of spring she came home late from a brilliant revel. The gas had been turned down in the drawing-room, but no sooner had Isadore entered than a form ran before her like Banquo's ghost, and that pair of eyes looked into her face.

"Isadore—Isadore Leland!" exclaimed the visitant, "for a month you and I have often met. I have traveled many a weary league to unmask a villain. Gerald Armington is not what he seems. You have thought that he is generous, and brave, and true—the soul of honor—like Chevalier Bayard, without fear and without reproach. He is, instead, an accomplished rascal—the vilest man in the purlieus of St. Giles' is not half so vile as he. Twelve years ago, when a youth of nineteen, he was convicted of murder and sentenced to the gallows, but as he was so young his punishment was commuted to transportation. He was sent to Australia, with a ship load of other convicts, and kept at hard labor for five years, when, despite the vigilance of the officers, he escaped, and, in a small boat, managed to reach a pirate vessel. He cruised under the black flag till he had amassed a princely fortune, and then, with an assumed name and character, came back to England. There was no danger that anybody could recognize young Holt in the elegant Gerald Armington, and when he fitted up a splendid establishment in Grosvenor square, and by his address obtained the entree of fashionable circles, you know what a sensation he created. Flattered and followed as you were, you were proud to see him at your feet, and it was the happiest day of your life when you were betrothed to him."

"Yes," gasped Isadore, while the hot tears rained from her eyes and dried on her burning cheek, "and no wonder. But how—how is your fate linked with his? How have you discovered all this?"

"I will tell you. When he came on board the pirate ship I was there, for I was the captain's daughter. He fascinated me as he has you, and I soon learned to love him—nay, to worship him. When we stood side by side on deck in the moonlight he told me his strange story, but I loved him none the less. Born and nourished in the atmosphere of crime, I had no such delicate shrinkings as you would have; I clung to him, and we plighted our troth. I was at length transferred from the ship to a convent, where I was to be educated, and he solemnly promised that in a year's time he would come to Avignon and marry me. But he broke his vow. I waited in vain, and then, then, with a wild purpose at my heart, I resolved to follow him. I did not dream of his returning to the land he hated, so I journeyed as far north as Russia, as far south as Spain, and, finally, weary and penniless, I crept into London. Lounging about the opera house, I saw him enter with you on his arm, and bribed an actor with the sole ornament left me—a bracelet which had been his gift—to give me access to the stage box. The next I need not repeat. Are you satisfied?"

"Perfectly," faltered Isadore.

"Now, what course shall you take?"

"Dismiss him at once—tell him that I loathe him!" and the girl drew herself up and looked majestic in her indignation.

"Let me advise you. Do not summon him and tell him all you have learned, for he is eloquent, and might plead his cause in such a manner as to warp your judgment. But grow cool in your demeanor, accept the attentions of other gentlemen, and in a few days write him a brief note, stating that with your present feelings he is not the person who could make you happy, and request a release from your engagement."

Isadore reflected awhile, and then said:—

"I shall follow your suggestion—you are wiser than I. I suppose I ought to thank you for unmasking Gerald Armington."

For an instant they clasped hands. The next moment she had gone, and Isadore Leland was staggering to her room.

Hours of fierce conflict ensued—hours during which the poor girl thrust her love down into the depth of her heart, and tried to bury it forever, but when she fancied its sepulchre sealed like those of olden times, it would rise and troop forth with a long procession of painful memories.

When the morning dawned she had gained a good degree of self-control, and descended to the drawing-room. Mr. Gerald Armington was soon announced, but when he entered he found her tete-a-tete with a young earl. Had her betrothed trodden upon her own heart-strings she could not have been more moved, every step sounded like a death-knell, but she seemed too much absorbed in the earl's conversation to heed her lover's presence. His good-morning aroused her, and she rose to welcome him, but only as she would have welcomed an ordinary acquaintance.

Armington felt piqued, but he was too well bred to manifest it; some ladies came in, and while the earl monopolized Isadore he chatted with them. What was his astonishment when he heard his fair fiancee accept an invitation to drive out to one of the earl's seats with him that afternoon. His own request to find Villiers there and at the next fete the new favorite danced the first set with Isadore Leland, and it was whispered by more than one pair of red lips that Gerald Armington and his fair bride elect had quarreled, while the gentlemen asserted that a titled suitor had put plain Mr. Gerald Armington in the shade. Isadore had never looked more brilliant than on that evening; her tall figure was set off to advantage by an exquisite dress of amber silk, trimmed profusely with black lace; her wealth of chestnut hair drooped low over her crimson cheeks, and was gathered into a jeweled net at the back of her head; jewels blazed on her neck and arms, and in the bouquet holder, crowded with tea roses, which had been the earl's gift.

She danced once with Armington, and, as they clasped hands, she managed to leave in his possession a slip of paper. He did not unfold it till he reached home, when he found the following:—

"Mr. Armington.—Circumstances have convinced me that you are not the person who can make me happy. I claim a release from my engagement and hope you will not hesitate to set me at liberty." Isadore Leland."

It would be impossible to describe the storm of passion which swept over Armington as he perused the above.

"Heartless girl!" he exclaimed; "she picked a quarrel with me the other day that she might have some ground for her perfidy! For a month past she has not known herself; I suppose she could not resist the temptation to be a countess. Well, let the coronet rest lightly on the brow of one false as she is fair!"

With these feelings he drew a sheet of paper from his escritoire and wrote:—

"You are free. I will not reproach you; but ere you die you will repent of your cruelty.

Armington."

That the lie which had bound the two lovers was broken; the next week Armington closed his house and sailed for the continent, and Isadore Leland went into the country, whither she was followed by the Earl of Villiers. He laid hand, heart and fortune at her feet, but she could not bring herself to accept them. Still he did not relinquish all hopes, and when the gay season again commenced renewed his suit.

"I believe you love me as nobody ever loved me before," replied the lady, "but I cannot even now give you an affirmative answer. I am going to Brighton for the summer, and the first day of autumn you shall know how I have decided."

To Brighton went Isadore Leland, and she had not been there a week ere she was joined by the Earl of Villiers. One July morning a new arrival might have been seen lounging in one of the reading-rooms, but his attention was diverted from the journal by a voice which sent the blood leaping through his veins in a lava tide. He glanced up—there, just across the narrow street, but so near that he could have touched her with his walking-stick, stood Isadore Leland.

She wore a bright velvet riding-dress, with a neat frill of lace about the throat and wrists, and a beaver hat, with a sweeping veil. One hand gathered up the folds of her voluminous skirt, the other grasped a gold-mounted riding-whip. The next instant Villiers dashed round the corner, his liveried groom leading a splendid white horse. Isadore was lifted into the saddle, but not till her face had blanched at the sight of Gerald Armington.

That night as the discarded lover was strolling along the shore, a fearful tempest burst upon sea and land. The thunder muttered, the clouds hung black and heavy overhead, the winds shrieked and sobbed, and the waves boiled. Suddenly Armington heard a wail, and saw a pleasure-boat drifting at the mercy of the waves; the white sails and gay pennons were torn to shreds, and the frightened passengers were in a frenzy of distress. Finally it dashed ashore, with a single person clinging to its stern.

That young and darkly beautiful creature Gerald Armington recognised as Blanche Tremaine—a girl who had disputed the palm of beleship with Isadore Leland. He chafed her hands, procured a flask of wine, which he administered to her, ar I had the satisfaction of seeing her revive.

"Oh, Gerald—Gerald Armington!" she gasped. "I promised heaven in that solemn hour that I would confess if I lived to reach the shore!" and she proceeded to tell him how she had plotted to estrange him from Isadore.

My eyes startled her when they peered at her from the stage box. I haunted her like an evil genius. Send some of the fishermen to summon her."

The request was granted, and there, in a lowly hut on the shore, Isadore, having learned that the story which had prompted her to discard Armington was utterly false, was reconciled to her lover. Blanche never recovered, but was borne back to London, shrouded and coffined for the grave.

Remembering her treachery and her fate, it was with a solemn joy that Gerald Armington led his fair bride to the altar, and in the few years that have come and gone during their marriage their happiness has amply compensated for the gloom cast athwart their paths by the arts of Blanche Tremaine.

"THE STAGE BOX MYSTERY." "I will have gold or nothing, Gerald Armington."

History of a Parisian Gambling Resort.

The city of Paris has kept but 87,923 square metres of the land which in the time of Philip of Orleans (father of Louis Philippe) was a splendid park covering 190,749 metres of superficies. The space remaining over has been sold to an enterprising company, and the gardens are hemmed in all round by modern villas and palatial residences; still, notwithstanding the considerable diminution which has been thus made in its extent, it is even dropped, as it were, from a rich diadem, nestling in the drapery of this queen of cities. The story of Monceaux greatly increases the interest which the beauty of the place very naturally inspires. Its first master was a certain Grimod de la Reguiere, a very sad sire, whose history is to be found in the annals of celebrated gluttons. After having kept it up three years, he declared it was too spacious for a solitary man, and sold it to Philip of Orleans. Memoirs tell us that this prince had long sought a favorable retreat in which to hide the incidents of his private life from the prying investigation of Parisians. Monceaux was a most convenient spot. With the assistance of his friend and adviser, Carmontelle, the place was in the course of two years transformed into a perfect Paradise. The ground was sloped into gentle mounds, perspective light and shade were studded with consummate skill, and Carmontelle became a hero among the astonished lords in Philip's train. He was in truth a clever man, an artist, gardner, dramatist and author. Wood, rocks, grottos and cascades produced all the effect of an operatic tableau, whether contemplated at early morn or under moonlight. Temples, obelisks, tombs, were admired by the meditative, and many of the guileless were soon led astray in this perfidious Elysium. When all was completed, Philip called it Monceaux "folie," and such it did remain. A volume would perhaps half suffice to enumerate all the revels, feasts, and nocturnal adventures this place then witnessed. The moat was deep and the wall around it was high, but yet strange reports would ooze out from behind the stronghold. A day seldom passed without a tale of debauchery at Monceaux, and like an evil wind, it fanned the indignation of the Parisian population. This lasted four years, until at length the storm cloud burst and Philip fled. When he came back from his place of refuge, England, the year 1793 had swept over the land, and the vassalling days of the Prince were over. When Monceaux was still in the zenith of its evil renown, the prodigates of all the European courts assembled here to gamble undisturbed, and when a loser had nothing more to give but his heart's blood, a duel shortened his reckonings. On one occasion a young German risked a heavy sum, and lost it upon the green baize table. Shortly after, a report of fainting he had been the victim of some premeditated foul play, lost his temper. On putting down a third handful of gold, he swore, and was rebuked for being ill-mannered; as he lost the venture, and was moreover stung by reproof, he gave way to a volley of oaths. A bohemian, whose brain was heated by strong wine, desired him but to use such language in the presence of a prince. "Where all are thieves there are no princes," replied the German, rolling forth more imprecations. At this, all present rushed forward on the unfortunate stranger; he was knocked down, beaten, trampled to death and buried in the park. A few weeks later a tomb was raised above his body, of which the pyramid still exists. It is enclosed with railings, and try truths over it. Few who pass the spot know the story it records buried there. Days of mourning soon succeeded these lawless outbursts of revelry and desperate broils. Of all the tragedies acted out here, none had so dire an end as that which awaited Philip here below. Not the title of egalite which he gave himself could spare his head, for it rolled with others under the guillotine.

FOOLSCAP.—The term foolscap, to designate a certain kind of paper, no doubt has puzzled many an inquirer. The origin is not only amusing, but historical. Charles I of England granted numerous monopolies for the support of the government. Among others was the manufacture of paper. The water-mark of the finest sort was the Royal Arms of England. The consumption of this article was great, and large fortunes were made by those who had the exclusive right to vend it. This, amongst other monopolies, was set aside by the parliament that brought Charles I to the scaffold; and, by way of showing contempt for the king, they ordered the royal arms to be taken from the paper, and a fool, with his cap and bells, to be substituted. It is now over 200 years since the fool's cap was taken from the paper, but still the paper of the size which the parliament ordered for their journals, bears the name of the water mark placed there as an indignity to Charles.

"MAIDENHAIR FERN."
(PECULIAR TO ENGLAND.)

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

An emerald spray of tender leaves, entwined and interlaced,
It betters a breeze of English cheer across the ocean's waste;
It tells of Windsor and the bounds, the meadow and the park,
And, circling high above the hills, the anthem of the lark.

If whispers of the bending grain, the rangers' sturdy throngs,
Of flashing sickles, deftly whirled, amid the harvest songs;
That's how the sea-nymphs, fairly fair, amid the ocean's foam,
Of their own sea-land, dearly dear, shall sing the home to them.

The host, a man of generous heart, whose fondest wishes are
To grasp the pleasures of the world and scatter them afar;
The hostess, with her winning glance, her fair, inspiring face,
A queenly picture, sitting there, of hospitable grace.

And, rising up above them all, twin beauties glint and gleam—
Two liquid eyes of sapphire grey, the story of my dream,
"Two, only three," oh, no pedlar, tramp nor gipsy ever
This love, so full of hopes and fears, defies my self control!

Fair memories of a summer time, too beautiful to last!
All these the talismanic fern hath summoned from the past.
I pray that Time's advancing days may bring me this delight—
That she who holds my heart enchained will read its love aright.

PRATT'S PERPLEXITY.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY CHARLES H. DAY.

It was a party of rare spirits, ripe for mischief, who were wont to congregate during the winter of '71 within latitude of the genial warmth of the stove of the 24. Charles Hotel office. There might have been seen for many a night, until the hours grew small, Billy Burke, Dick Fitzgerald, "the Irish Lord;" Frank Gibbons, the gymnastic ladies' pet; Harry Hapgood, late director of the "Bridgeport Minstrels," and former proprietor of the "Great American Hen Show," and my western agent friend, F. O. Pratt, who had the summer before conducted affairs on the front with the "Great Consolidated Old Fashioned American Circus." Sometimes the Watson Brothers dropped in and spun a yarn of their travels with Haight and Wooten, and all the winter long there was a coming and going of shining lights in the varied constellations of the amusement world.

Wild were the pranks that the boys played upon each other, and the writer confesses himself a victim to more than one good joke, somewhat practical to be sure, but none the worse for that. New York was an unread book to friend Pratt, and he turned over a leaf every day to find something of interest to marvel at. When the night sessions came on he was there to explain the extraordinary qualities of his patent shoulder brace, and relate his experiences with "Varney's Dramatic Company" way out toward sundown, and explain what became of a portion of Grady's canvas "Down in a coal mine" in Scranton, Pennsylvania.

"About these days," quoting the almanac, Mr. Gannon opened a side show on Broadway near "Murderers' Row," close to the headquarters of "Reddy the Blacksmith." The several features had been brought down from the Barnum show which had been exhibiting at the Empire Rink, and consisted of the learned seal, several cages of animals, the sleeping beauty—whose respiration was apparently regulated by a Jerome clock located in the bosom of the recumbent fair one.

Hapgood had related for the ninety-ninth time his version of "what hair dye," and highly enjoyable associations with the nobility of Great Britain while connected with Rumsey and Newcomb's Minstrels; then, with the artifice and craftiness of a diplomat, he turned the conversation and made the startling announcement that Barnum's learned seal was nothing more nor less than a machine; an absurd statement, at which Pratt ejaculated most warmly, avowing that its promulgator could be little less than an idiot.

At this imputation Hapgood was in high indgeon, and referred for the confirmation of his statement to every one present, who with one voice substantiated every word of what he said, and expressed surprise that Mr. Pratt should be ignorant of a fact so generally known in the profession.

Words raged and the one sided discussion became loud and prolonged; it was at last agreed that the matter should be referred to George Guilford, late director of publications of the Bailey show, whom every one knows to be perfectly familiar with every member of the animal kingdom, from a [illegible] to the great bee-serpent. Thereupon the meeting adjourned until morning.

In the morning the genial Guilford was posted and well prepared to reply to the interrogatories of Pratt. Judge of his surprise when the sum of the quill declared that Barnum had never had a seal in his collection, and that in fact there was but a single one on the continent, and that was the property of "Old" John Robinson. Turning away disgusted, Pratt sought his breakfast, and Guilford dropped down to the side show and interviewed the door keeper, returning before his absence had been noted, and patiently waited for Pratt to finish his repast.

"I say, Pratt," said Guilford, "as you don't seem to believe me, I'll tell you what you can do—come down the street with me, and we'll leave the question to be decided by the door-keeper; of course you can rely upon what he says in the matter."

Pratt was introduced to the keeper, and was allowed to ask his own questions.

"Well, you see, Mr. Pratt," was the reply, "that is a pretty ticklish question to answer, and it would cost me my position if Barnum got wind of it. The way P. T. got into that clock business was through this educated seal; he got acquainted with Chauncey Jerome while he was making the parts up in New Haven. You see he is as full of wheels inside as your watch is, and it is probably one of the cutest contrivances ever invented. Barnum has made a power of money out of him, and feels the best of them just as it did you, though it is mighty tedious on the man that turns the crank."

Pratt would hear no more, but turned on his heel and left Guilford and the keeper fully satisfied in his own mind that they were a couple of inveterate jurnicks.

Perhaps a week elapsed when the learned seal was again recurred to, and humorous incidents related where-in the wool had been pulled over the eyes of the public.

"Of course you know," said the veracious Hapgood, directing his conversation more particularly to Pratt, "that Tom Hodge's Zip edition of the 'What is it' is generally believed to be of African blood."

"So it is," interrupted Pratt; "it's nothing but a nigger."

"Then I'm one," remarked Hapgood.

"Well, I'm willing to admit that," conceded Pratt.

"I am not much of a hand at betting," continued Hapgood, with a laugh at Pratt's sarcastic sally, "but, since you will be convinced at nothing, I'll bet the oysters for the crowd and leave it to Tom Hodge himself."

"I'll take that bet," exclaimed Pratt, jumping up.

The bet was made, the statement repeated, and the conversation wandered off into another channel. The next day Hapgood sought Hodge and instructed him how to act in his role satisfactorily, and Hodge agreed to be on hand that evening to decide the wager and the nationality of that remarkable nondescript, the "What is it."

Night came, and Hapgood guided Pratt to that popular resort of wearers of tights and spangles, kept by Lafe Nixon, where Hodge was found perusing the evening papers.

After chatting a while about the news of the day, the state of the weather, and the business that was being done by the "best foot party" at the Grand Opera House, by Barnum at the rink, and the veteran Lent, at his old quarters in Fourteenth street, Hapgood approached the subject by allusions to some of Hodge's experiences in the past.

"Let me ask you one question?" queried the impatient Pratt, anxious to win the oysters.

"Certainly," answered the agreeable Hodge.

"Is Zip a nigger or not?"

At this question every one laughed uproariously, and loudest of all laughed Hodge.

"Oh, I thought you knew all about that," returned Hodge. "I'm telling this to you not to go any further, for of course there are little secrets in the profession which every one shouldn't know, and are not to be blabbed on every corner."

Every one was attention, and Pratt hitched impatiently about, while Hodge pulled away quietly at his segar. After quite a pause, he said:—

"Between you and me, Pratt, Zip is white, and we black him up twice a day."

"It's a lie, a thundering lie," shouted Pratt, "and you are worse idiots than the 'What is it,' the whole pack of you."

Oysters were now in order, and the boys immediately began to "nominate their choice," while Pratt protested in vain that he had not lost the wager, and that it was a "put up job." Mr. Hodge was overwhelmed at this sweeping denunciation, and called upon good natured Charley Pell to bear witness to his truth and veracity.

Soon the oysters came smoking on the table, and Pratt inquired if there was not some gentleman present who would oblige by convincing him that the bivalves before him were "clams," and it was his earnest hope that they would produce in every partaker thereof the most dreadful results of colic and night-mare combined. But nothing of the kind was visited upon the wretches, for they enjoyed the repast hugely, smacked their lips thereat, and said "good!"

"I would recommend to you all," said Pratt, "a pair of my patent shoulder braces—they are very useful in making crooked ways straight, though I fear that a gross a piece would hardly make you capable of telling the truth."

Being called upon to explain the mechanism of his patent brace, he demonstrated it upon the margin of a newspaper by a pencil drawing, which was passed around and critically examined by all, who exclaimed in almost one voice:—

"Did you get a patent on that? Why, I saw the same thing when I was a boy."

"Now boys," protested Pratt, "I am willing to believe for your sakes that negroes are white and that seals are run on the same principle as hand organs, but I know one thing—I invented that shoulder brace, and I'm going to get out of this confounded show business right away, and make a fortune out of it."

"Now you may think," exclaimed Hapgood, "that you invented them braces, but they were originated years ago, and I'll bet you another oyster supper that Uncle John Tryon and Joe Pentland wore them before you were born."

Pratt hesitated for a moment and then exclaimed, amid shouts of laughter that went round the table:—

"But who will you leave it to?"

HARD TO "SATISFY."

If you wish to know what manner of young man De Witt Clinton was, you have only to read the official report of the duel which he fought in 1804 with John Swartwout, at Weehawken. Clinton was then opposing Aaron Burr, and Swartwout accused him of being actuated in his opposition only by personal and selfish motives.

"He is a liar, a scoundrel and a villain!" exclaimed the hot-headed Clinton.

A challenge followed, and a duel was fought. I suppose that it was the most remarkable affair of the kind that ever occurred—out of Ireland. The first fire doing no harm to either antagonist, one of the seconds asked Swartwout:—

"Are you satisfied, sir?"

"I am not," said he, with more bluntness than courtesy.

They fired a second time without effect.

"Are you satisfied, sir?" asked the second.

"No!" thundered Swartwout.

The men fired a third time without effect, when the same gentleman again politely asked Mr. Swartwout if he was satisfied.

"I am not," was the reply; "neither shall I be until that apology is made which I demanded. Until then we must proceed."

Swartwout's second then presented a paper containing the apology demanded, for Clinton's signature saying:—"We cannot spend our time in conversation. This paper must be signed or we proceed."

"I will not sign any paper on that subject," said Clinton, with firmness and dignity, "I have no animosity against Mr. Swartwout. I will willingly shake hands, and agree to meet on the score of former friendship."

The fourth fire then took place, when Clinton's ball struck his obstinate antagonist in the left leg, below the knee.

"Are you satisfied, sir?" the wounded man was again asked.

Standing firmly at his post, he answered:—"It is useless to repeat the question. My determination is fixed, and I beg we may proceed."

While the surgeon was extracting the ball from the opposite side of Swartwout's leg, Clinton again declared that he had no animosity against Swartwout; that he was sorry for what had passed, and was willing to go forward, shake hands, and bury the circumstance in oblivion. Swartwout, however, standing erect at his place, insisted upon the written apology. A fifth time they fired, and Clinton's ball struck his antagonist in the same leg, a little below the former wound.

"Are you satisfied, sir?" asked the second.

"I am not, sir!" replied Swartwout; "proceed."

Clinton then left his station, threw down his pistol and declared that he would fight no more.

Whereupon Swartwout, turning to his second, asked what he should do, to which the second replied:—

"There is nothing further left for you now but to have your wounds dressed."

So the combat ended, and the two parties returned in their barges to the city.

Since Clinton was thirty-three, when he had already been a member of the legislature, and was about to enter the senate of the United States. He was brave to rashness, and ambitious beyond measure; but he lived up to the standard of his day, and acquitted himself of every trust with honor and distinction.

SWIMMING FEATS.—Apropos of the attempt to swim across the channel between Dover and Calais, the London Standard says:—It may be mentioned as a curious coincidence, that the time occupied by Lord Byron when, in emulation of the once supposed impossible feat of Leander, he, in company with Mr. Ekenhead, swam across the Hellespont from the classical Abydos to Sestos, was exactly one hour and five minutes. "The whole distance from the place where we started," writes Byron, "to our landing on the other side, including the length we were carried by the current, was computed by those on board the Salsette, the frigate, at upwards of four English miles, though the actual breadth is barely one." Chevalier Ekenhead, the other exploit had been performed by a young Jew for his mistress, and Oliver, cited by Byron, mentions its having been done by a young Neapolitan. "A number," to continue the quotation, "of the Salsette's crew were known to have accomplished a greater distance; and the only thing that surprised me was that, as doubts had been entertained of the truth of Leander's story, no traveler had ever endeavored to ascertain its practicability." Lord Byron himself, when he swam from Old Lisbon to Belem Castle, had previously made a more perilous but less celebrated passage—the distance traversed was greater, and the time occupied was two hours. Two of the greatest swimmers of modern times have certainly been Franklin and Professor Wilson. Both the solver of the secret of electricity and Christopher North accomplished feats greater in point of space traversed than Johnson did on Saturday, but in smooth and almost tideless water. We are by no means certain whether an exploit which the gifted and unhappy American genius, Edgar Allan Poe, achieved is not amazr the very first of the deeds of natatory prowess which can be mentioned. On a hot day of June the author of the "Raven" swam from Richmond to Warwick, seven miles and a half, against a tide running, as his biographer states, "probably from two to three miles an hour," in a little over two hours. The truth of this statement was questioned during Poe's lifetime, but its authenticity was allowed to be conclusively attested when it was publicly vouched for by several well known gentlemen of Virginia, who witnessed the feat.

SHERRY NONSENSE.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

The sun is up, the summer sun,
The cocks begin to fly,
And shooting bastoon like fun
Are pressing through the sky;
The swallows lead all others
For skip across the sea,
All Nature seems so blithe to-day
That I must merry be!

Last week I was a wallaper,
And had a bushy tail,
Next week I may be something worse,
A grampus or a whale,
So let me like a cardine sing—
My nerves health renew,
We know not what a day may bring,
So I will merry be!

"HALF."—The Michigan state prison convicts are to have a course of lectures, it is said. Is not their present punishment severe enough without this newly proposed infliction?

NEWS OF THE WEEK BOILED DOWN.

☞ Chief of Police F. J. McWilliams and Detective Doyle, of Jersey City, were Arrested on Oct. 5th, charged with complicity in the attempt to rob the First National Bank of that city. Mr. A. D. Garrabrant, the prosecuting attorney, made an affidavit, upon which they were arrested. The evidence against them was strong and the judge bailed them in $20,000 each to appear for trial.

☞ The palace and monastery of the Escurial, the summer residence and mausoleum of the Spanish kings, in ashes from Madrid, was struck by lightning on the evening of Oct. 14, and the flames thereby set ignited until the night of the 16. The building was preserved, with the exception of two towers and a portion of the roofing, and all the treasures are reported safe. The loss is estimated at 3,000,000 reals.

☞ The locomotive and express cars of the Cincinnati express on the Pennsylvania railroad were thrown down an embankment, twenty-five miles west of Philadelphia, Pa., on Oct. 1st. The engineer, Charles Keller, and the firemen, Chas. Kline, were killed. None of the passengers were injured. The accident was caused by some miscreant having removed the joint bolts and plate from the rail in the outer curve and unfastening the rail.

☞ Accounts of the fate of the lost steamship America have been brought by the China, which arrived at San Francisco, Cal., on Oct. 20, with 29 of the officers and crew of the ill-fated vessel. The America was on fire while lying in the port of Yokahama on the night of Aug. 24th, and was towed from the shipping and sunk. Three Americans, fifty-nine Chinese and a number of Japanese were lost, besides $250,000 worth of treasure.

☞ A number of Germans being despossessed by German occupation, the people en masse refusing to assume German citizenship. It is said that 80,000 Alsatians are preparing to take up their residence in Nancy, and numbers of others will go to other places. Within the past three weeks 16,000 have left Metz to seek homes under French jurisdiction.

☞ Five thousand bricklayers went on a strike at Chicago, Ill., last week. The employers wish to reduce wages, but the workmen insist upon $4 for eight hours' work, and 50 cents an hour for additional work. These demands have been complied with in some instances.

☞ On Sept. 24th three companies of cavalry, aided by friendly Senalapa Indians, under command of Colonel Mason, attacked a large force of Apache and Mogave Indians in the mountains near the Santa Maria river, Arizona, 40 being killed and many wounded and captured.

☞ It is stated that President Thiers intends, at the next session of the National Assembly of France, to urge the conservative deputies to support a proposition for the definitive establishment by proclamation of a permanent republic based on strictly conservative principles.

☞ According to the London Times, the Emperor of Russia has recalled his congratulations to M. Thiers, and expressed his dissatisfaction with the aggressive attitude of the radical party in France.

☞ The Cincinnati, O., exposition closed on the 5th inst., the proceeds having aggregated $100,000. A guarantee fund of $126,000 has been subscribed for the exposition of 1873, which will, probably, be raised to $200,000.

☞ On Oct. 3d three passenger cars on a western-bound train on the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railroad, fell through a trestle near Greenville, Tenn., one man being killed and twenty-seven persons injured.

☞ A 30-foot cylinder boiler in Fulton & Co.'s rolling mill, Norristown, Pa., exploded on Oct. 1st, several persons being severely injured and much destruction of property caused.

☞ Little is known of the cholera, save that it is a severe attack of gout, the Right Hon. Sir James Shaw Willes, one of the judges of the Court of Common Pleas, committed suicide at London, Eng., on Oct. 3d.

☞ In the Irish High Court of Chancery a commissioner has taken depositions in support of a claim against the United States for $40,000, for the destruction, during the rebellion, of a quantity of cotton, valued at $1,000,000, belonging to claimant.

☞ Lord Redesdale has published a long letter in London, Eng., condemning the action of the government representatives at the Geneva court of arbitration, and accusing them of sacrificing the interests and honor of the country to those of Earl Russell.

☞ The postal treaty between the United States and Germany, for the exchange of postal orders, came into operation on Oct. 1st. The value of the German thaler has been fixed at 71 cents, gold.

☞ A passenger train, while running at full speed, came into collision with a freight train near Carlisle, Cumberland, Eng., on the 3d inst., 3 persons being instantly killed and many others seriously injured.

☞ The Spanish government has, it is said, resolved to submit to other European powers its claims against the United States growing out of damages sustained through filibustering expeditions to Cuba from our ports.

☞ A band of Mexican cattle thieves were followed to Newton, Mo., on Sept. 23d, and attacked by a party of Texans, who burned the Alcalde's house, with the owner in it, and killed several Mexicans, losing two of their number.

☞ Dr. Isaac Butt, M. P., for Limerick, Ireland, delivered a lecture in Dublin on Oct. 2d, in which he boldly avowed himself a federal union, and urged the election of members only who were favorable to the cause of home rule.

☞ A dispatch from Yokahama, Japan, to London, says that two more vessels were lost by the burning of the steamship America has been recovered.

☞ The Georgia election was held on Tuesday, 1st inst., and resulted in the success of the democratic ticket, Smith being elected governor by about 40,000, or as far as heard from. The democrats will maintained the lead, rounding the buoy boat off the waterworks wharf at precisely 1.30 P. M., beating her adversary six minutes and with the race added to her already score of victories, still retains the title of champion. This is the sixth time the Dager has won the champion flag. The judges were Samuel Rice, John Rice and Benjamin Norman.

THE SAPPHO AND DAUNTLESS boat clubs were contestants in the three-mile race for oared shells, on the Harlem river, on the 1st inst. The struggle was close, and more than three hundred yards of the finish, when some person fired a gun, which the stroke of the Dauntless, then ahead by a few feet, mistook for the signal to cease rowing, the only one of the Athletics to reach his base, which he did by an error of George Wright's, was put out at second by McVey's throw. In the fourth innings Barnes was nailed at the home base and was given a base on called balls, McBride's wild throw afterwards giving two unearned runs to the Bostons, while the Athletics were whitewashed in one, two, three order. George Wright taking a hot liner from Anson's bat, within a few inches of the ground, a magnificent catch. Both were whitewashed in the fifth innings, Harry Wright alone making a clean hit, Rogers making a brilliant catch at right field off Fisler's bat. Leonard and McVey's good play gave the Bostons their first and only earned run in the next innings, while the Athletics were whitewashed, McGeary being left after making a clean hit. George Wright, after two hands were out, was given his base on called balls in the seventh innings, while Barnes, Leonard and McVey followed with safe hits, and a ball fielded in by Cuthbert that bounded over McGeary's head gave the Bostons three unearned runs. Two fouls that fortunately bounded into McVey's hands were the means of retiring the Athletics for another blank, leaving Meyerle, who had made one base by a good hit. In the eighth innings of the Bostons the first two strikers were put out, and Rogers was missed on strikes by McGeary, going to second base thereby, and coming home on Harry Wright's hit to left field, Cuthbert holding the ball too long. Harry Wright then came from second home on George Wright's one base hit to centre field, although Treacy fielded the ball well. McBride made several futile efforts to catch George Wright at second base, and finally made a wild throw that enabled him to run home amidst great laughter. A couple of errors by Schafer gave Treacy and McGeary their bases in this inning, but the former was decided out at second by the umpire on McVey's throw to Barnes, and the latter was left by McVey putting out Cuthbert on strikes, the catch being a lucky one, as the ball bounded at first over his head. Mack was decided out by the umpire, as in endeavoring to get out of the way of a wild pitched ball it struck his bat, and then bounding off his body, was caught by McVey, who fielded the ball to first to cut off Treacy, and asked for judgment on a double play. The umpire called time, and asked the opinion of George Wright in regard to the double play, which he had no right to do, and on the statement thus made by Wright, he erroneously decided Mack out on foul, (?) although the ball was caught half-way between pitcher and home base, and as she ball had not been fielded to the pitcher, he decided Treacy was not out. Both nines were blanked in the last innings, although Leonard had opened with a safe hit. The game thus resulted in favor of the Bostons by a score of 10 to 0, this overwhelming defeat being the worst ever sustained by the Athletics, and which they can attribute to their wretched batting and the superior base-running of their opponents, the fielding of both being equal, the pitching of Spalding being the most effective that the Athletics have batted against this season, and he was well supported in the field. George Wright's short stopping, McVey's catching, and Gould's first base play being remarkably brilliant. Leonard excelled in batting, George Wright lending efficient service by his very fast base running. McGeary caught much better in this game than in the preceding one, and Anson played finely at third base, Meyerle excelling in the out-field. The score was as follows:

SOOTHING SIGNS.

It is very cheering to know that the Presidential canvass is to be conducted on the Christian principles of humanity and brotherly love. Mr. Greeley has solemnly declared that he will cease all profanity in his discussions with the other man; while Gen. Grant, with equal magnanimity, has assured Horace and his supporters that he does not intend to imbrue his hands any longer in human gore, but that his intercourse with them, in their friendly differences of opinion concerning the lease of the White House, will be in harmony with the actions of his pious supporters. This is well, and goes far to convince us that the fruits of the Geneva arbitration are already exerting a healthful influence among a sodality of peoples. Messrs. Greeley and Grant, we may be pardoned for remarking, are not to be held responsible for any little ebullition of feeling that may occasionally manifest itself among their adherents in the quiet watches and discussions of the night; on the contrary, those gentlemen will do all in their power to curb the outcroppings of a heated and angry dispute, and prevent, if possible, any hostile demonstration. This pure, virtuous, and holy desire to bury the differences of the past, and work together for all of all classes, is due to the influence exerted by the press, whose abiding faith in the virtue of mankind has already found frequent utterance in their articles. Believing that "a soft answer turneth away wrath," our contemporaries no longer indulge in those shameful expressions, that undignified language, and utter disregard of the amenities of gentility and good breeding, which, in former political campaigns, have made the name of American a by-word of reproach with other nations. Journals now vie with each other in pointing out the good qualities of their adversaries, instead of, as formerly, vilifying them in their most tender relations. They are all now united on the subject of peace and good will to man, and a more happy family than the brotherhood of journalists has not been seen since the destruction of Barnum's aggregation of curiosities at the fire in the Chinese buildings. Let us rejoice that the lion and the lamb are lying together.

SLAVERY.—We had thought that slavery and the sale of human chattels had been wiped out with the close of the rebellion, but just you read this, which we find in a Boston paper, in a notice of the annual sale of pews, etc., in one of the aristocratic churches:—"The annual sale of the ladies of —— Society will take place to-morrow," etc. Are we drifting back into the arms of slavery? Of what avail is Lincoln's emancipation proclamation, or the fifteenth amendment, if human freedom is to be thus bartered away? This is another sorrowful result of Gen. Grant going to the Boston Jubilee.

THE PRESENT undefined condition of the presidential campaign makes it an extremely difficult matter for "neutral" papers to shape their "independent" courses. The contest promises to be close, and this prevents utterance of those self-evident truths which neutral journals so delight in promulgating. Had General Grant or Colonel Greeley a sure thing of it, then it would be plain sailing, and the neutrals would be found arrayed on the winning side. As it is now, the independent opinions of to-day may have to give place to principles directly opposite to-morrow.

WHEN THE WOODPECKER of Chappaqua made that sage remark, "Go West," even he could have had no idea of the wonderful fertility of the soil out there. We now learn that the people of ex-bleeding Kansas are "alarmed at an army of toads three-fourths of a mile long." Toads of such a monster calibre are enough to create alarm. If President Grant could only be induced to spare a day or two from his labors at Washington, and go out to Kansas, he might be able to do something to ameliorate the condition of the toad-beleaguered people of that too fruitful country.

IF "COL. TOM SCOTT" would pay a little more attention to the "New York division of the Pennsylvania railroad," curses would not be so loud or deep upon his offending head. Since the New Jersey railroads passed into the hands of the Pennsylvania company, the time tables are of no use, trains between New York and Philadelrhia being sometimes one and two hours behind the schedule, and accidents are more frequent than under the old regime.

THERE MUST BE some mistake in that report about a man in Mobile being fined $25 for unsuccessfully attempting to bribe an officer of the law. We should like to have the particulars, for if he failed to bring over the officer, he must have made a very low offer. Let us have the details.

THE TURF.

JEROME PARK RACES.
Bancroft Defeated.

SECOND DAY, SATURDAY, OCT. 5th.

The first day's proceedings are given on one of our sporting pages. Saturday, the 5th inst., the second day, was not so favorable as the opening day, and the attendance was small. A numerous body of the Stock Indians, in their war paint, feathers and parti-colored blankets created quite a picturesque scene. They occupied seats in the upper part of the members' stand, and viewed the proceedings with characteristic stoicism, manifesting no interest in the sport, until the exciting contest between Harry Bassett and Monarchist in the Maturity Stakes, on the last mile, aroused them from their assumed apathy, and they exhibited the greatest interest in the final struggle on the home-stretch.

THE HUNTER STAKES,

for three year old fillies, $200 entrance, $50 forfeit, with $300 added, the second to save her stake, one mile and three quarters, had three runners out, of the twenty-nine entered. These were Woodbine, H. A. B., (a half sister to Preakness;) and Mimi, belonging respectively to Mr. Belmont, Mr. Sanford and Mr. Whitney. Woodbine, from her previous successful running this season, having won the Monmouth Oaks and Alabama stakes, was made a hot favorite, pools selling as under:—

Woodbine	$200	$300	$100	$300	$510	$400
Mimi	100	60	50	150	220	165
H. A. B.	75	60	25	90	150	115

The following summary gives all necessary particulars:—

SECOND DAY.—THIRD RACE.—Second Day, Saturday, Oct. 5th, 1872.—FIRST RACE.—The Hunter Stakes, for three year fillies, $200 each, $50 forfeit, with $300 added; the second to save her stake; closed with twenty-nine entries; value of stakes, $3,400; a dash of a mile and three-quarters.

THE MILE HEAT RACE

for a purse of $700, had four horses entered, and all of them started. They were Preakness, Tubman, Nevada (a full sister to Saltina) and Meteor. The McDaniels' confederacy were very sweet on their representative, Tubman, who came to the post in superb condition, while Mr. Sanford was equally sanguine about Preakness, although he looked high in flesh, and there was a strong commission out to back him. Pools sold as under:—

Tubman	$525	$1,050	$1,775	$1,750
Preakness	360	800	1,080	780
Nevada	180	450	675	410
Meteor	135	300	305	380
Totals	$1,190	$2,600	$3,610	$3,385

AFTER FIRST HEAT.

The field	$50	$70	$80	$65	$80
Tubman	300	230	410	330	320
To'al	$350	$300	$490	$400	$285

First Heat.—Preakness and Nevada were away first, but Meteor took up the running at the turn, with Tubman second and Preakness next. Going around the hill, Tubman deprived Meteor of the lead, and held it along the lower stretch, where Preakness made his run, and collaring the favorite, led him half a length into the homestretch. Up the straight it was a struggle between these two, Tubman outrunning Preakness, and winning the heat by two lengths. Time, 1:45¾.

Second Heat.—A wretched start, Nevada getting off several lengths ahead, Tubman being second, and Preakness so far in the rear that he never had a chance in the race. Tubman steadily overhauled Nevada, and when they re-appeared in sight after skirting the hill, he was running head and head with her, six lengths before Meteor. Coming home the pace was a terrific one, Tubman fairly outrun the sister to Saltina, and he came home an easy winner by a length; Meteor third and Preakness last. Time, 1:47. Summary:—

SAME DAY.—SECOND RACE.—Purse $700, for all ages; five per cent entrance to go to second horse; mile heats.

THE MATURITY STAKES

for four year olds, $200 each, half forfeit, with $1,200 added: the second to receive $300 out of the stakes, three miles, had twenty entries and two runners, Harry Bassett and Monarchist, the high quality of the starters amply compensating for the paucity of the numbers. Nearly every one regarded it as a foregone conclusion for Col. McDaniels' chesnut, who had thrice beaten Sanford's colt in their three year old form. So certain did his victory appear, that the odds were more than three to one against Harry Bassett's chance, the pools selling as under:—

Monarchist	$40	$35	$85	$80
Harry Bassett	405	250	240	370
Totals	$445	$370	$425	$450

AFTER FIRST MILE.

Harry Bassett	$55	$85	$85	$55
Monarchist	250	150	150	300
Totals	$305	$235	$235	$355

Harry Bassett made his appearance first on the track, and he looked well, although many experts and judges pronounced him too high and short of work; he was ridden by his usual jockey, Jimmy Rice. Hayward had the mount on Monarchist, who appeared in the pink of condition, and looked to be in the pink of health, and his eye bright and clear. He drew the inside position, but Harry Bassett jumped off in front when the flag fell. He did not long retain his advantage, for, on the upper turn, Hayward took Monarchist to the front and, cut out the running at a tremendous pace. But Rice's orders were evidently not to wait behind, and as they went along opposite the stables he took sides with his opponent, and as they went around the club house bluff, Monarchist's head was at Harry Bassett's girth, and they are lost to view behind the hillabout as they again come in sight Bassett has his neck in front, and they enter the home-stretch thus. Up the straight their speed is terrific, and as they go under the string, the three miles, with Monarchist on Bassett's flanks, the timer's chronometers mark 1:45. Such a rate could not possibly be maintained throughout, for although in his memorable race with Longfellow in the Saratoga Cup, Bassett ran the first two miles in 3:30, yet here three miles is the distance to be travelled. Hayward's tactics are evidently to force Harry Bassett to his highest speed, if Monarchist was able to do so, relying on his superior condition to outstay the great chestnut in the end. Throughout the second mile Monarchist hung like a remorseless shadow on Bassett's flanks, and could not be shaken off, despite the efforts of Rice to urge his horse to higher speed. Around the turn for home Monarchist led by the entire quarter, the two horses flew with but slightly diminished speed, Harry Bassett a short length in front as they went under the string to enter the third and last mile, the second mile having been run in 1:45¾. Monarchist's condition was at its height in the third mile, and his blood could not stand the continued strain much longer, and the pace of both became slower and their stride shorter. On the turn, Hayward, who had carefully and skillfully keeping him well together, again went up to Bassett and forced the pace, laying at his saddle girths past the quarter pole, but around the bluff he got to his head, and they went out of sight lapped together. Acclamations now broke forth for one anticipated seeing the mighty Bassett run so close by a horse he had three times beaten before. When they again came in view they were still lapped, and continued so to the home-stretch. Now fairly into the straight run in, Hayward, with whip and spur, called upon Monarchist for a final, decisive effort, and the gallant son of Lexington and Mildred responded by shooting past Harry Bassett like a thunderbolt, and the latter, fearing he would show temper, and going on, won the race by two lengths in 5:34¾, amid such tumultuous cheering as has never been heard at Jerome Park since Abdel Kader sent down Kimbolton in the dust in the last mile race one year ago. Both horse and rider received an ovation of applause on returning to weigh, and Hayward was warmly congratulated. The layers of the long odds lost not a cent, for it was the severest race they had received throughout the season. Mr. Sanford, although he won nothing beyond the stakes, $3,700, was highly gratified at the victory of his colt, who thus recompensed him for the defeat of Preakness in the previous race. Summary:

SAME DAY.—THIRD RACE.—Maturity Stakes, for four year olds; $200, half forfeit, with $1,200 added by the club; the second horse to receive $300 out of the stakes; closed with twenty entries; value of stakes, $4,700; a dash of three miles.

THE CHAMPAGNE STAKES,

for two year olds, $200 each, half forfeit, with $1,200 added, three-quarters of a mile, had ten entries and five runners, viz., Count Dorsay, Minnie W., Cora Linn, Survivor and Pennock, all by Jack Malone. The pool betting was as follows:—

Survivor	$350	$480	$725	$900
Count D'Orsay	230	360	600
Minnie W	80	205	360	1,200
Pennock	110	190	610
Cora Lynn	130	250	250
Totals	$845	$1,485	$2,480	$2,100

Survivor was the favorite, having been purchased by Mr. John Chamberlin of Mr. J. M. Clay this summer, on the strength of a fast trial the morning before (half a mile in 50½ sec.) was made a hot favorite. A wretched start was had, Count Dorsay, who carried a 7 pound penalty for winning at Saratoga, getting off in front, and had run some distance. Minnie W. jumped off on the lead, with Survivor second, Pennock third and Cora Linn next. Pennock took second place at the turn into the home-stretch, but could not catch Minnie W., who won easily by a length, Survivor, Pennock's filly second, three lengths before Survivor. Had Count Dorsay got off it is pretty certain he would have won.

THE HURDLE RACE,

for a purse of $600, one mile and three-quarters, had five runners—Lochiel, Blind Tom, Astronomer, Dan and W. M. Tweed. Lochiel was the favorite against the field, and, after a capital struggle with Blind Tom, won by half a length, in 3:36, the fastest time for the distance over hurdles on record. Sorrel Dan fell at the second hurdle, the bridle bit having broken in his mouth, which lost his rider all control over him. Summary:—

THE NASHVILLE RACES.

Upon one of our outside pages will be found an account of the first five days of the autumn meeting at Nashville, which was brought to a close with considerable eclat on the 5th inst., a summary of the sport during the week having appeared in April next. The style of game has not yet been decided upon.

THE DIAMOND CUE CHAMPIONSHIP.—The well traveled John Deery has finally settled down in this city, having purchased the room at 185 Sixth avenue. It is Deery's intention to issue the usual challenge to Cyrille Dion, holder of the Diamond Cue. This would be a most interesting match, inasmuch as Deery is the only player who has ever got away with Dion at the four ball game.

NELMS VS. DION.—Efforts are being made to match Edmund H. Nelms, of Philadelphia, to play Cyrille Dion at the four ball game, the latter giving odds of 600 in 2,000.

WILLIAM GOLDTHWAIT.—This expert has joined the forces at Reeves' room, 345 Broadway.

TOURNAMENT IN CHICAGO.—A project is on foot in Chicago for a tournament for the championship of the south side.

PEDESTRIANISM.

JOHN THOMAS, the Newark flyer, called upon us on the 7th inst. and desires us to state that he will run Moulton (who challenged him last week) in two weeks from signing articles, 100 yards, for $250 a side, $100 forfeit. The start to a flying one, or, if they fail to get away in half an hour, to go by report of pistol. Thomas will take expenses and run Moulton upon Suffolk Park, near Philadelphia. If this suits the Gopher boy he can communicate with Thomas in care of Geo. Kuhnrath, 152 Market street, Newark, N. J., appointing a place of meeting.

MISS LAURA KEENE,
on the invitation of LITERARY and CHRISTIAN
YOUNG MEN'S ASSOCIATIONS, will give a SERIES of
COSTUME RECITALS,
ILLUSTRATED POEMS,
throughout the States, aided by the arts of PAINTING, COSTUMES, MUSIC, and MLLE. CLARA STELLA, pupil of MADAME EMMA SEILER, with SIGNOR G. MOROSINI, pianist to the KING OF ITALY.
Miss Keene's inaugural recital was given before a Convention of Ministers and Laymen, at Norwich, N. Y., on the 3d of September last. She held her audience spell-bound by pathos, or convulsed them with laughter at comedy. The fresh young voice and pure method of Mlle. CLARA STELLA were a surprise to the cultivated musicians present. Signor Morosini hit the popular taste with charming selections from LISZT, THALBERG, and STRAUSS, on one of ALBERT WEBER'S clear-toned pianos.
Lecture Committees for particulars of early date to AMERICAN LITERARY BUREAU, Cooper Institute, New York.
LAURA KEENE AT MUSIC HALL.
This distinguished artiste appeared last evening before a fashionable audience at Music Hall, and for more delightful two hours could not well be spent. Gem after Gem was rendered by the gifted Laura, with great power and pathos, then a select and beautiful bit of vocalism by a very superior artiste, Miss Clara Stella, and instrumental music by Signor Morosini, one of the first pianists in this country. "A Morning Call" by Miss Keene and Mr. Turck, is a remembrance that will make life sunny for a long time. Wherever Miss Keene has been with her present company she has been most agreeably received by delighted audiences. This is no clap-trap "show" but a really artistic and cultivated entertainment, such as we are constrained to say, seldom visits this city.—Kingston Herald.
Applications from halls or theatre managers for the services of Miss Keene and party to be made to

CUPID'S FOIBLES, FOLLIES AND FANCIES.

WHAT HE WOULD DO ABOUT IT.

O if my love offended me,
And we had words together,
To show her I would master be,
I'd whip her with a feather.

If then she, like a naughty girl,
Would tyranny declare it,
I'd give my love a cross of pearl
And make her always bear it.

If still she tried to sulk and sigh,
And show a carring on the sly,
And smother her with roses!

But should she clench her dimpled fists,
Or contradict her betters,
I'd manacle her tiny wrists
With dainty golden fetters!

And if she dared her lips to pout,
Like many pert young misses,
I'd wind one arm her waist about
And punish her with kisses!

OTHELLO THE SECOND.

A Wife Smothered to Death while Sleeping.

At a festive social gathering in a country house near Waverly, Ill., during the Christmas holidays of 1870, a young farmer of the neighborhood, and the particular rural belle who was supposed to reciprocate his partiality for her, attracted the attention of the embarrassed company by unequivocal signs of a serious breach of good feeling between them. The arrival of the girl under the escort of an admirer whom she had previously treated with marked indifference, and the subsequent appearance of the yeoman alone and in an apparently sullen humor, were the first occasions of surprise to the assembled merry-makers; but the common feeling of wonder grew still more serious when, upon the fair coquette's curt refusal to dance with her lately favored swain, the latter denounced her in round terms and a high voice as a faithless flirt, and threatened to cast her cavalier of the evening from the nearest window. The insulted woman burst into tears, angry words passed between the rivals, and when finally the interposed remonstrances of older friends induced the now illustrious young farmer to retire from the scene, the pleasure of all the guests had been so effectually destroyed that the whole company soon broke up in sou ething like a panic. What had caused the alienation of the over, and this ensuing scene was never known in Waverly. Rumor explained it in various ways, and speculative comment on the subject carried with it public verdict in the spring of the following year, when the heroine of the affair was married to the person who had been her companion at the merry-making. From the night of the latter, her so strangely discarded lover never spoke to her again, and, soon after her marriage, himself married a young woman to whom he had paid some earlier attention, and moved to Evansville, Ind. Here he and his bride lived in seeming harmony, their very passionate devotion, until toward the Christmas holidays again, when a dreary change appeared to come over both of them, and the few acquaintance they had made in their new home believed that some secret trouble had befallen them. While this impression remained, the young wife was found dead in her bed one morning, of what a coroner's jury pronounced disease of the heart. A foreknowledge of the fatal affliction had, it was thought, been the cause of the gloom noticed in both husband and wife, and the former, by his increased depression and silent doggedness under his bereavement, received the commiseration of those to whom he deigned no other expression of feeling than an obvious desire not to be questioned about it. There was a mystery here, however, even as there had been in the very different affair at Waverly. The glum, uncommunicative widower moved again some distance out of the town, where, as the Journal of the latter place relates, he has recently died, literally of a broken heart and remorse, after making a startling confession to a kind old woman, who, from motives of humanity, attended and soothed his last hours. His wife, whom he had married more for spite against another than from love for herself, confessed to him, some months after their marriage, that, in the desperate hope of winning him back to his former allegiance to her, she had turned his later sweetheart against him by managing to introduce one of his old undated love letters to herself into the envelope of a letter he had intended for her rival, and pretending, when called to account by the latter, that the writer was playing them both falsely at the same time. She had interrupted the true letter and changed it, and told with ingenious falsehood, the story of her own name, above described. Upon hearing the confession, extorted from her by remorse and a consciousness that she was still unloved, her husband declared that he would never forgive her while he lived, and warned her to leave him before his hatred made him do that for which he would never be forgiven. She did not heed his warning, hoping, desperately, perhaps, that her love might yet plead for her, and, according to his own recent dying confession, he smothered her to death while she slept.

CAUGHT NAPPING.—Fred. Wahle had for three years been courting Ann Kemmeren at Rochester, N. Y., and had solemnly promised to marry her when he got ready. The betrothed couple boarded in the same house, and, it is presumed, saw much of each other, and often. Ann was always ready and willing, but Fred. was always willing but never ready. At length Fred. gave Ann $20 to buy goods in order that he might be married, but still said nothing about time, and time, it appears, was an object with Ann. She bought the wedding things, and having bought them, was determined to get married in them. She set a day, or rather a night, and Fred. Wahle knew nothing of the arrangement. He went to bed early that night and was soon fast asleep. Ann stole into his room, removed his trunk and his every day clothes and shoes, leaving Wahle nude bare save and the bones of Fred. The preacher arrived and the whole boarding-house was invited, and Ann married another boarder. Before the ceremony had been performed, some one awoke Fred, and told him what was going on in the parlor below. He was in no condition, and could not put himself in condition, to appear among the wedding company in time to forbid the nuptials. He had no wedding garment. So the strange marriage was duly solemnized, and the next day Fred. Wahle made complaint before a justice of the peace that Ann-Kemmeren had cheated him out of $20. He said nothing about being robbed of a wife. She answered that he had given her the $20 to get married on. She had got married and had given the last of the money to the preacher. There appearing to be no cause for the law's interference, the justice dismissed the case, with some friendly advice to the slow and too confiding Fred. Moral—Matrimonial hesitation is the thief of $20.

A WEDDING INSTEAD OF A FUNERAL.—A young attorney of St. Louis, Mo., named L. B. Beach, brother to the man whose killing by Joseph H. Fore caused an excitement only equalled by the trial of the accused, had been for some time paying his addresses to an estimable young lady named Miss Eva J. Campbell. Their acquaintanceship led to friendship, and by an easy transition passed into love, and from that to the usual consummation, a promise of marriage. The young lady, however, took sick and on the day of the promised visitation of the comet was in such poor health that her life was despaired of. She was then residing at No. 2,035 Eugenia street, and the certainty of her speedy dissolution being almost conceded by the attending physicians, her affianced husband, true to her in sickness as he had been in health, and she equally faithful to him, it was mutually agreed that the matrimonial ceremony should be solemnized then and there. Dr. Yelverton was sent for, and in the presence of many friends the union of the living to the expectant dead was consummated. Love, however, romantic as were its fulfilments, proved more potent than the physician's skill, and the fair bride, so far from going from her bridal to the grave, rapidly grew better, and a few days ago was so far recovered as to be able to be out. She is now rapidly convalescing, and her amiable and intelligent young husband, while he is not unforgetful of the tissue of romance which characterized his wedding, is as justly proud of his bride as though they had been united at the foot of the sanctuary, with all the accompaniments of light and music and brilliant costumes.

A FRENCH TRAGEDY.—The Paris newspapers give details of a most extraordinary and complicated drama, which is said to have taken place in Paris. Jean H——, who had fallen into needy circumstances, after having occupied a good position in trade, engaged himself in June last as coachman to Monsieur L——, an ex-director of an insurance company, living in the Avenue Trudaine. In a few weeks Jean H—— initiated himself into the graces of the family to such an extent that eventually his master determined to dismiss him, but the wily coachman suddenly eloped with the only daughter of the house. Monsieur L—— searched far and wide, but could learn no tidings whatever of his eldest child, until some time after, when he at length received a letter from Jean H——, in which, after begging forgiveness for carrying off the young lady, he asked her father's consent to their marriage, as the only means of repairing the dishonor of the family. Monsieur L—— immediately rushed off to the address indicated in the letter, to rescue his daughter, but before he reached it, owing to the heat and excitement, he was struck with a fit of apoplexy, and died in a chemist's shop. The sudden death of her parent struck the young lady with remorse, and having cursed her seducer, she returned home, when she succeeded in obtaining her mother's pardon. Next day, as she did not come down to breakfast, the servant went up stairs and found her dead in her bed, she had poisoned herself. On the sight of the body the mother went raving mad, and is now said to be on the point of death.

ARRAIGNMENT OF THE DANCING GIRLS OF BELIAL.—Under this caption the Cincinnati Enquirer of the 2d inst. states that, on Sept. 30th, a number of ladies and gentlemen, disciples and followers of the Muse Terpsichore, were engaged in their favorite pastime of dancing at Hopkins' Hall. The facilities for the occasion were provided by Messrs. Geo. Martin and Stofer & Moore. While the music was at its height, and the starry-eyed damsels of pleasure were sweeping through the mazes of the seductive waltz, Lieutenant Birnbaum appeared upon the scene with a posse of police, and claiming to act under the law, arrested all of them, about forty in number, and conducted them, wailing and lamenting, to the Ninth street station house, where they were all compelled to give bail for their appearance yesterday morning. Order and decorum were also dragged ignominiously along the dark streets to the hostile hamel, where they were likewise compelled to give bail for their appearance in court. The ordinance under which the lieutenant claimed to derive his authority reads as follows:—

DANCES AND CAROUSALS.—SECTION 4. It shall be unlawful to get up dances or carousals for idle or dissolute persons, or attend or frequent the same.

Next morning the police court was enlivened by the appearance of a large number of these women, attended by Godey and Stofer, and the hearing of their cases was postponed until the 3d inst.

A CORNER IN WIVES.—"Corners" are not confined to Wall street, New York, or to State street, Boston. Neither are they made wholly by dealers in stocks and bonds. The Zulus of South Africa do not need a missionary to teach them to be shrewd. Though a strong and robust people, they have a decided weakness for womankind. They have as many wives as they have means to purchase; and, unlike many in civilized countries, they buy not with gold, or houses, or estates, but with cows. Twenty, thirty, fifty, or a hundred cows are given for a wife, according as the girl is young and beautiful or otherwise. One bold Zulu operator with capital once bought up all the young and desirable girls in the market of the whole region, and compelled all who wanted to buy to pay most exorbitant prices for wives. Of course there was much distress, and this disastrous state of things attracted the attention of their government, and the recurrence of it was prevented by a law which fixes the legal price of a wife to be only ten cows. No man can collect more than this by law. He may receive fifty if he will, but he can force no one to pay more than ten. The Zulu law stands as a friend to fairness and equity, and the bulls and bears alike are obliged to respect it, for their laws are strictly carried out. Cases of litigation growing out of polygamy are more numerous than from any other source.

THOMPSON is not going to do anything more in conundrums. He recently asked his wife the difference between his head and a hogshead, and she said there was one. He says that is not the right answer.

Interlocutor, Mr. ——. Bones, you seem to have lost your accustomed elasticity of spirits. Has anything gone amiss?

BONES.—No; wus dan dat. Somedin's gone wid Missus—Missus Bones, I mean. My wife's got tired o' henpeckin' and clar'd de coop.

INT.—Indeed! what a relief that must be to you.

BONES.—O, it ain't nuffin' to crow over. She took all de silver and loose change along wid her. I waked up de oder night, and dar, right in de middle ob de flo', I seen a gwost. I know'd it was a gwost bekase it was dress all in white and didn't say nuffin'—only waved its hands and went right smack froo de wall. I didn't want to woke de ole woman, 'cause I know'd she'd begin ladlin' out her slack jaw, so I slipt out my side of de bed and followed de gwost.

INT.—What—through the wall?

BONES.—O, no—de do' was open.

INT.—Pshaw! the thing, whatever it was, went through the door, of course.

BONES.—Well, de do' is in de wall, isn't it? So, de gwost it went glidin' out into de entry and I followed it, guidin' myself by de wainscot, when all at once it gib a sneeze.

INT.—A ghost sneeze! I never heard of such a thing, sir.

BONES.—O, yes—and the gwost walked right down de stairs, and—

INT.—You followed, of course.

BONES.—Ob course I did. Jus' as it cum to de coal hole it stopped and gub a knock, and de door opened slowly, and a gre-at black head, all cubbered wid wool, poked out, and I tought it was de debbil, sure, and jus' den I gedder up all my strength and gib one push, an' in de gwost went head ober heels, an' I locked de door and—

INT.—You took to your heels, I suppose.

BONES.—Yes, I didn't. I called out "Blue murder! police, police!" And de cossifers dey come in, and de lights was brought, and de do' was frowed open, and dat—well, what you spose it wus?

INT.—I can't imagine, sir. Some of your dulcineas, I suppose.

BONES.—Well, de gwost was sittin' in de lap ob de darkies gal, Pompey Duckinger, and blest if it wusn't my wife! Dat's what dat nigga'd been sneakin' round for. She let' wid him dat night, an' I ain't seed nuffin' oh dem since.

When the Birds of Summer Fly.

When the birds of summer fly,
And the northern breezes blow,
Friends in social groups draw nigh
The welcome fireside's cheerful glow;
And while the time is set in thrall,
Heedless of the passing time,
Figures dance upon the wall,
As in a shadowy pantomime.

Chorus.—Light wing'd messengers of air,
On swift pinions soaring high,
Bearing with ye life and song,
Whither, whither do ye fly?

Round about the social board
Comrades sound the gay refrain,
Let the miser count his hoard,
We will all be young again;
Time will laugh with us to-night,
To our mirth as thus we quaff,
Toasting friendship's offering,
While re-echo song and laugh.

Chorus.—Light wing'd messengers of air, etc.

SHAKESPEAREAN CONUNDRUM.—The following questions are proposed for Shakespearean scholars to answer:—Did "the books in the running brooks" contain flowing sentences? If the "three thousand ducats well" of Shylock was an artesian one? If when Richard saw the "sun of York" there was any heir apparent? If the "sermon in stones" weren't hard reading? If those "who stood upon the order of their going" at Macbeth's supper did not have to set out without further orders? What Ranger "called for" when Falstaff there "was no speculation in those eyes?" If Richard refused to "let the coffin pass," did he order it up? If the tale that the ghost of Hamlet's father "could unfold" was equal to that of a rattlesnake? Was Bottom on the school board when he said, "Masters, spread yourselves?" Was it solid time when Puck "put a girdle round the earth in forty minutes?" Was Ariel in the newspaper business when he said, "I will be correspondent to command?" If "Care keeps his watch in every old man's eye," where does he keep his clock?

MY BEAUTIFUL DEAD.

BY ARTHUR W. FRENCH.

Down where the violets sleep, dreaming away the sweet hours—
Down where the soft breezes creep over the white wildwood flowers.
Peacefully lying at rest, with the cold earth for their bed,
Fair immortelles on each breast are all my beautiful dead.

Chorus.—Peacefully lying asleep,
Down in their lone, narrow bed,
Never to wake or to weep,
Are all my Beautiful Dead.

Eyes of the black and the blue, little hands dimpled and white,
Under the grass and the dew, hidden away from my sight.
All through the summer day long, happy birds sing overhead,
Never a sound of their song reaches my Beautiful Dead.

Chorus.—Peacefully lying asleep, etc.

"THE STAR SPANGLED BANNER."—We are indebted to John T. Ford, the well known theatrical manager, of Baltimore, Md., for the following intelligence regarding the adapting of the words of this song to music, and where it was first sung in public:—At an encampment on Gallows Hill, near the Rope Walk, Baltimore, Md., just after the battle of North Point, and when the dread of another attack was imminent, there were two young actors named Durang, who, with their father and mother, belonged to the dramatic company of the Holliday Street Theatre, and who were alike clever in music and acting. A manuscript copy of Francis S. Key's new national song was read. Ferd. Durang immediately applied himself to adapt it to music. During the day he discovered a suitable tune in a favorite air called "Anacreon in Heaven but three lengths behind at the three quarter pole. On entering the home-stretch Camors made extra efforts, and the two were making lightning speed, Fullerton to retain and Camors to obtain the lead, but the effort proved too much for the latter, so that when victory seemed almost within his grasp, he went up, and the Judge passed the goal in the fast time, considering the heaviness of the track, of 2:21¾.

Third Heat.—Notwithstanding the result of the previous heat, while waiting for the next start Camors was still the financial favorite, but on his re-appearance reaction took place in investments, for it was apparent that his previous exertion had been too much for him, and when the word "go" was given, Fullerton had but little trouble in taking and keeping the lead all around, and, although travelling well, was forced to no extra speed, finally coming in winner in 2:24¾, many lengths ahead of Allen, who had attained second place, Camors third, Whiteman last.

Fourth Heat.—The final result was now a foregone conclusion, This heat, therefore, needs no further description than to say that Fullerton took the lead and maintained it throughout, Allen second, Whiteman third, and poor Camors last. Time, 2:28.

Summary:—

SAME DAY.—Purse $4,000, for horses that have never beaten 2:23; $2,100 to the first, $1,000 to the second, $500 to the third and $400 to the fourth horse; mile heats, best three in five, in harness.

RACING AT JEROME PARK.

FIRST DAY, WEDNESDAY, OCT 2.

The autumn race meeting at Jerome Park, Westchester Co., N. Y., commenced on the 2d inst., and its advent indicates the close of the racing season in the north. The day was bright and clear, but a chilliness in the air gave premonition of the approach of winter, and rendered overcoats and heavy wrappers necessary for comfort. The attendance was both numerous and fashionable, the track in excellent order, the fields of contesting horses large, and the racing of an exciting character. The judges were Messrs. Withers, Purdy, Monson and Gen. Taylor; the timers, Messrs. J. Hunter, M. A. Littell and W. Turnbull; the starter, Mr. B. G. Bruce, and Mr. Charles Wheatley the clerk of the course and secretary.

THE MANHATTAN HANDICAP was the first race, and was a sweepstakes of $50 each, half forfeit, with $500 added by the jockey club, the second horse to receive $200 out of the stakes, one mile and a quarter. Of the twenty horses entered for this race, sixteen accepted the handicapper's weights, and nine came to the post when the saddling bell rang. These were M. H. Sanford's Preakness, 117lbs., and Monarchist, 111lbs.; D. McDaniels & Co.'s Tubman, 111lbs., and Sue Ryder, 86lbs.; Carroll & Coare' Ortolan, 116lbs.; J. Donahue's Lord Byron, 101lbs.; J. O'Donnell's Fanchon, 95lbs.; D. Weldon's Mary Louise, 93lbs., and J. Chamberlin's Brennus, 90lbs. The Sanford entry is made a hot favorite in the pools, and in the ring Monarchist is freely backed against the field, for the knowing ones remember how easily he won the two handicaps at different distances on the last day of the fall meeting last year, and how successfully he ran at the New Orleans meeting, both last fall and this spring. The followers of Col. McDaniels' stable stand pluckily to their guns, and back the equine representatives of the Confederacy, Tubman and Sue Ryder, for heavy amounts. Ortolan has also many friends, for they saw him win the spring handicap at this distance, carrying the same weight, in a canter, from a large field of good horses, and Mary Louise has also some following. Fanchon, the actual winner, is completely overlooked, except by her owner, Mr. John O'Donnell, and a few of his personal friends. How low she was rated may be seen from the subjoined pools, in which she sold in the field, along with Lord Byron and Brennus:—

Sanford's entry	$340	$500	$600	$805	$820
McDaniel's entry	280	420	460	655	505
Ortolan	105	150	140	150	125
Mary Louise	100	145	130	150	115
The Field	55	65	25	55	45

In the mutual pools, Fanchon sold in the field, along with Ortolan, Byron and Brennus, and every $5 ticket on the field netted the purchaser $52.87. The start was from the three-quarter pole, and without any delay Mr. Bruce despatched them to a capital start, Mary Louise taking the lead, Lord Byron second, Monarchist and Sue Ryder third and fourth, and the rest bunched, except Breakfast, who got off last, and never improved his position throughout the race, being seemingly unable to raise a gallop, and causing people to ask why he had been started at all. Sweeping up the home-stretch, they went under the string in the following order:—Fanchon in the lead, Sue Ryder second, Lord Byron third, Mary Louise and Ortolan fourth and fifth, Monarchist and Tubman the two next, abreast of each other, Brennus eighth and Breakfast last, and a long way behind. Approaching the Club House bluff, Lord Byron took second place, Sue Ryder being third, Monarchist fourth, Ortolan, Mary Louise and Tubman coming next in the order named, and they ran thus around the hill out of sight. On re-appearing in view, Fanchon was still leading a length, but Ortolan and Monarchist were now her immediate followers. As they entered the home stretch, the grand struggle commenced. Tubman emerged from the ruck, and with Ortolan and Monarchist, charged in hot pursuit of Fanchon. At the half distance Ortolan died away, and Fanchon stalling off the determined challenges of both Tubman and Monarchist on each side of her, won cleverly by a length, Tubman securing the $200 for second horse by a neck from Monarchist. Time, 2:13. Value of the stakes, $1,165. The winner is a chestnut filly by imp. Australian, out of the celebrated mare Idlewild, whose four mile time of 7:36½, with 25 odd pounds weights up, is the fastest ever run in the north. She was bred by Mr. J. J. Alexander, and was purchased when a yearling by Mr. D. Swigert. At the Saratoga meeting of 1870, when two years old, Mr. John O'Donnell leased her racing qualities for $2,500, and first ran her at the Saratoga Stakes, the same meeting, won by his own filly Mary Louise, Harry Bassett being third. She next ran unplaced in the Nursery Stakes at Jerome Park, the same fall, won by Harry Bassett, with Mary Louise second and Blair Athol third. At three years old she started five times and won once, and at four years old this was her first appearance. Her owner landed a large stake by the previous winners of this race:

THE JEROME STAKES,

for three year olds, $100 each, half forfeit, with $1,500 added by the club, two miles, was the second race. This was formerly called the Champion Stakes, and was mile heats, but is now renamed, and made a two mile dash. There were 61 entries, but the death of Mr. J. S. Watson has rendered two of them void. Of the remaining 57, only the following four came to the post, the prestige of Col. McDaniels' representative frightening all the others away:—Joe Daniels, Mate, Meteor, and True Blue. The latter was short of work and ran very—but the others looked in superb condition. Joe Daniels was a great favorite, two to one being offered on the ring, while in pools he sold as under:—

Joe Daniels	$220	$610	$1,450	$3,100
Meteor	100	180	710	830
Mate	45	175	725	745
True Blue	30	75	160	170

Mate took the lead, with Meteor second, the favorite third, and True Blue last, a position he retained throughout the race. The horses cantered slowly for the first quarter mile, where Joe Daniels went to the front, but did not improve the pace until the home-stretch was entered, when Mate and Meteor, as they went under the string on the first mile, Joe Daniels and Meteor were head and head, four lengths before Mate, with True Blue far behind. Going around the bluff, Joe Daniels drew a length clear of Meteor, the latter suddenly quitting, and they went around the bluff, and Mate took second place. Without ever having to extend himself, Joe Daniels galloped along at his leisure, and won "hands down" by four lengths, Mate second, four lengths before Meteor, and True Blue beaten off. Time, 3:49¾. Joe Daniels has now won the principal three year old races of the season, the Belmont Travers, Kenner and Jerome Stakes, the four amounting to $18,130, thus rivaling the achievements of his great stable companion, Harry Bassett, the year before. We give the previous winners of this race:—

THE NURSERY STAKES,

for two year olds, $50 each, play or pay, with $1,000 added, one mile, the second horse to receive $200 out of the stakes, had 50 entries, of which two were rendered void by Mr. Watson's death, which left the stake worth $3,400. This was the most interesting race of the day, as no less than fourteen youngsters started, viz. Belmont's imp. Breadalbane colt, dam Ellesmere; Hunter and Travers' Reviler and Strachino; Col. McDaniels' Katie Pease; L. W. Jerome's Kitty Clark, colt by Lexington; J. Pennock's Planet colt; D. Withers' imp. Stonehenge; F. Morris' Long Branch; J. O'Donnell's Lightning colt; J. Coars' The Nurse; Gov. Bowie's Catesby; G. Bell's Luna; M. A. Littell's Wildidle, and S. D. Bruce's Galway. The Breadalbane colt was reported on good authority to have cleared out all Mr. Belmont's two year olds at home, including the flying Silkstocking, and he was made the favorite. Hunter and Travers' pair being next in demand. Katie Pease had a strong party of backers among the partisans of the McDaniels' stable, and Mr. Littell and his friends were very sweet on Wildidle, a large and muscular son of Idlewild and Australian, and, consequently, a full brother to Fanchon. The pools sold as follows:—

Littell's entry	$140	$135	$170	$310	$100
Belmont's	90	180	330	1,830	600
Hunter and Travers'	85	150	310	1,050	775
McDaniels'	110	125	305	925	300
Bowie's	45	105	235	905	300
Withers'	45	100	180	300	100
The Field	160	170	370	460	220

The start was from the widest part of the home-streich, opposite the ladies' department of the grand stand, so as to give the large field of youngsters plenty of room; the race finishing at the same place. A good send off, with the exception of Stonehenge, who was turned round, was quickly effected, but before they had run a dozen lengths, something struck into Katie Pease and threw her down, and as her rider, Shields, was rising, Galway struck him and broke his collar bone. Directly after, Jerome's colt ran in front of the favorite, and threw him down, both he and Katie Pease running riderless after the other horses. Wildidle and Long Branch passed under the string first, Reviler next, Jerome's colt fourth, Luna and Pennock's colt next, and the others bunched. Going around the bluff, Long Branch and Wildidle drew away from the rest, the former leading a neck, and together they raced around the hill, Reviler, Jerome, Strachino, Stonehenge's colt and O'Donnell's colts following in the order named. Coming in sight, Wildidle was seen leading Long Branch a length, Stonehenge third, and Reviler close up. Wildidle retained his lead home, and won, "hands down," with comparative ease by three lengths, Long Branch second, and Reviler nearly third. Time, 1:45%. The winner is by imp Australian sire of the three principal winners of the day, out of Idlewild, and was bred by Mr. Alexander, of Woodburn stud Farm, Kentucky, and was sold as a yearling to Dr. A. G. Herr for $1,475, who resold him to Capt. Moore for Mr. Littell of this city, his present owner. He is a grand-looking, racing-like colt, 15¾ hands in height, a bright bay, with small star, and one white foot. He has one further engagement this year, but is in all the leading three year old stakes next season. Value of the stake, $3,400. We give the previous winners of this race:—

THE PRIVATE SWEEPSTAKES

for foals of 1869, $300 each, $100 forfeit, four miles, had nine entries, but none appearing but Mr. Withers' Rixie, she walked over for the forfeits.

THE THREE-QUARTER MILE DASH

for a purse of $400, entrance money to go to the second horse, introduced the visitors to Harry Bassett, who had for opponents Fadladeen, Elsie, Hattie O'Neill, Lochiel, Wheatley, Nenna and Henrietta. The betting was $300 to $100 on Bassett, who, after laying behind so far on the first quarter mile as to cause the layers of odds to feel uncomfortable, cut down his horses in rapid succession on the second quarter, and cantered leisurely home a winner by four lengths; Elsie second and Fadladeen third. Time, 1:17¾.

BASE BALL.

MUTUAL vs. BALTIMORE.
A Legitimate Tie Game.

On Oct. 1st the Baltimore Club visited New York, en route to Boston, to play their seventh game with the Mutuals, and though fine weather prevailed and a grand game was to be expected, the attendance was limited to about four or five hundred people. The Baltimore Club played Mathews as pitcher, the Mutuals batting with less effect against he pitching than against that of Fisher. Higham caught, too, in place of Hastings, and filled the position with great credit. In fact, the nine were as good as they could have presented for the match.

THE GAME.

Play was called at 3.20 P. M., at which time the Mutuals went to the bat. But for a bad muff of Mills' in trying to stop a ball with his feet instead of his hands, the Mutuals would have been whitewashed. Instead, however, by this error and a drop-fly by Pike, assisted by two first base hits, the Mutuals scored 3 unearned runs. On the Baltimores' side they retired in regular order, the Mutuals opening with a lead of 3 to 0. In the 2d innings the Mutes were whitewashed easily, and the Baltimores scored an earned run, Pike, Hall and York hitting safely for bases. The 3d innings left the score as before, at 3 to 1, neither side scoring, though both made single base hits. In the 4th innings the Mutuals, after getting two men on bases, were again blanked, the Baltimores, by the good hits of York and Carey, scoring an earned run, the score now standing at 3 to 2 only. The 5th innings added no runs to the total on either side, the fielding being sharp, with good catches made by Hall, McMullen and Eggler, Hall's being a very fine one. The 6th innings was marked by the sixth whitewash in succession for the Mutes; a fine catch was made by Pike, and a good stop by Radcliff. For the Baltimores, though Hall made a two baser, the others gave easy chances for outs and retired. In the 7th innings, after two rounds out, Boyd made a high fly which York ran in for on the call, but he was too far out and Boyd had a life given him, and by Hicks' and Pearce's base hits a run was got in, not earned. On a passed ball another run was scored, the score now standing at 5 to 2, the Baltimores having an inning to play yet, and by a good rally at the bat they made 2 earned runs, Force, Mills, Radcliff and Pike making telling hits. This changed the score somewhat, the Mutuals now leading by one run only. In their 8th innings Cummings led off with a two base hit, and by called balls and a muff three bases were occupied after two men were out, but no run was scored after all. As the Baltimores were neatly whitewashed, owing to good catches by McMullen, the ninth innings became very interesting, the score standing at 5 to 4 only, the Mutuals being in the van. The first two strikers retired in succession in the 9th innings, but the next two made base hits, and one run was scored and earned, it being the first on the Mutual side in the game. This left the Baltimores two runs to tie. This number they obtained by the good batting of Force, Mills and Radcliff, the innings closing with a score of 6 to 6. It not being dark yet, though getting near it, the game was continued another innings, and after the Mutuals had again been whitewashed, the Baltimores gave easy chances for outs, and the tenth innings terminated with a tie score of 6 to 6, and as it was now too dark to play fairly, the game was called. The score is appended:—

In the 9th innings a point of play occurred worthy of special comment. Three men were on bases, when Pike hit a foul ball to left field, which McMullen ran in for and caught in splendid style on the bound, but in jumping for the ball he fell on his head, and in such a way as to cause him to drop the ball. It was at a distance, and it was rather difficult for the umpire to see the catch. He was appealed to for judgment by both parties, with boyish calls of "he caught the ball," "he dropped the ball," etc., and it was some time before he decided the question. Now the rule governing this point is quite plain and explicit. Rule 6, section 3, reads:—"No decision given by the umpire shall be reversed upon the testimony of any player, and neither shall umpire be guided in his decision by any such testimony. The captains of each nine shall alone be allowed to appeal for a reversal of the decision of the umpire, and then only in the case of a palpable error in misinterpreting the rules."

Instead of the captains acting in the matter, the players of the two nines kept up quite a discussion for some time in a very unprofessional way. As it happened, the decision did not affect the result, as Pike was caught out on a fair ball.

BOSTON vs. BALTIMORE.
The Reds Victorious.

These clubs played the sixth game of their championship series at the Hub on the afternoon of Wednesday, Oct. 2d, about one thousand spectators being present. At 3.10 the game commenced, with the Baltimores at the bat; but, although Higham opened with a hard hit over the third for a base, he was forced out before reaching second, and two of his companions, being unsuccessful with the bat, a blank was the result. The Bostons then retired in one, two, three order, the first three men go ing out at first base. Radcliff assisting each time. The second innings gave a blinder to each side. On the third Hall and York each made a safe hit, Carey was muffed by Gould, Force got a base hit, while McVey had a passed ball and Leonard made a two errors in the left field, on each of which a base was made. The result of this was two unearned runs for the "ex-Canaries." Again the "Reds" took an application of the whitewash brush, but showed the proper spirit of resentment by giving their opponents a double dose of the same mixture in the next two innings, Spalding, Barnes and Gould exhibiting a fine specimen of double play in the fifth. Up to this point the Bostons had done nothing in the shape of batting, but on the fourth innings they got in three safe hits and scored two earned runs, which left the score even. On the fifth they also earned two runs, George Wright and Rogers making safe hits and Leonard hitting hard to centre field for a couple of bases. The score was then 4 to 2 and the Baltimores went in, and from two good hits, aided by the same number of errors, they added one, which was not earned. In the last innings for the Baltimores Higham got a two base hit and Radcliff a single, but no runs were added. The Bostons showed some splendid batting in the seventh, making four good hits, including one double-baser by Schafer. The latter was touched out between second and third by Force, who held the ball as it was on the return from Schafer's hit. Another earned run was added in the eighth innings and this ended the runs, with a score of 8 to 3. Although the Bostons led their opponents by large odds at the bat, they were behind as far as fielding was concerned, and seemed to be somewhat lacking in the vim which has come to be regularly expected of them. We appended is the score:—

ATLANTIC vs. MUTUAL.

The eighth game of the series between these clubs was played on the Union grounds, L. I., on Oct. 2d, in the presence of two or three hundred people only, there being a decided falling off in the attendance at ball matches now that the championship is virtually settled. The Mutuals opened with the lead, and maintained it to the close with ease, the Atlantics being unable to score except in the first and last innings, when they obtained singles. Loose fielding led to a score of 10 runs by the Mutuals, only one of which was earned, the Atlantics getting ten first base hits in the entire game. Pearce, Hatfield, Hicks and McMullen led in the field, and Start at the bat on one side, Dehlman, Burdock, Ferguson and Lowe putting the most players out on the Atlantic side, and Lowe leading at the bat. The following is the score:—

Introductory Overture.

MONDAY, Oct. 7, 1872.

In these times of political strife, when it is the privilege of an independent press to slander candidates for public office with an unsparing hand, and to invade the domestic fireside and assail the family circle in vile and indecent language, many legitimate duties which the journalist owes to society are entirely lost sight of: those things left undone which should have been done, and offences committed which should have been omitted in the cause of morality and virtue. Apprehensive that none of our enterprising contemporaries have had time to give a passing thought to a subject of such vital importance as that which now occupies our mind, we hasten to break the news gently to our readers, and to inform them that "the melancholy days have come, the saddest of the year," and we shall, no doubt, receive the thanks of the people at large for thus forestalling our editorial brethren and for making known this self-evident truth. Keep your seats, friends; the consciousness of having performed a great public duty is, like virtue, its own reward.....Can a prima donna be said to possess a rich voice just because she gets one thousand dollars a night for warbling to a poor audience?.....And talking of politics and music, "strings" still rule in the cosmopolitan city. We have a Tammany ring, a reform ring, a critical ring, a bridal ring, and, in the piano line, a Chickering. In justice to the inventor of this instrument, we ought to state that this innocent little puff was unsolicited by that gentleman.....We have had another big Indian show, the Sioux, the Arapahoes, and the Grand Duke Alexis and the Bear; Mr. and Mrs. Boy on a Horse, and other noted wild denizens of the forest. These braves are fresh from scenes of blood and carnage in the homes of the Western white settlers, and they come here to be feted and wined and stuffed with fish balls and things, as an evidence of our appreciation of their efforts to familiarize the pale face with the dark ways of red skin ingenuity. The Indian curiosity and the white Lucca were brought face to face, and each sang at the other with equal delight. If Minnie Hauck and Tommy Hawk had been present, the musical quartet would have been complete.....Speaking of a quartet, "Our Jim" says that in looking over our court records the other day, he noticed a statement that "Tweed et al." James says that there must be a mistake in this, as "Tweed is a libril man, and alwase sheres with the poor."..... There is a snake now prancing around somewhere, which is said to leave a track four inches wide. We don't see anything wonderful in this; if a four inch track is not wide enough for the insect to squirm in, he ought to be made to leave it.....A sweet little girl of sixteen years and a regulation size pannier, kindly inquired if we would'nt like to take her to the Elks' benefit. "Yes, if it doesn't rain, dear," was our smart reply, adding with characteristic cleverness, "for this is not intended to be a stag party."..... Those enterprising speculators who calculated on the success of little Nell, but didn't, now talk of going to the diamond fields of Africa, for Daly won't permit them to operate in his "Diamonds" field..... It is with pain and mortification that we read in the "respectable daily press" such advertisements as this:—"Wanted—A good cutter; one used to the business preferred," etc. What are we coming to when the press is permitted to flaunt such indecencies before the very face of our courts? What will the provinces think of us? Has it occurred to our contemporaries that such things are calculated to injure the trade of the city by frightening our customers away?.....Talking of "days of yore," and remembering how, in the "good old times" we are so apt to boast of, so many of those who are courted favorites now were then in a state of starving in the very act of eating, owing to the absence of the now popular lunch route, or "run up a chalk" for three cents' worth of crackers and cheese, it is with pride that we bear witness to the approving smiles of fortune which every hour now reveals. The days when actors were accounted "vagrom men" have now gone by, never to return. And therefore we make rhymes about it:—

O, don't you remember the days when in tights
For the first time we figured before the footlights;
When the sound of "hi, hi!" to the marrow would thrill,
As we rushed in the "ho, ho-d Hottinot" to fill;
And, mid clapping of hands and loud stamping of feet,
The pulses with fev'rish emotion would beat?
The time has gone by when we'd tramp it all day
With the whole of a roll for a meal by the way;
When we'd feed on dried apples or dine on a crust,
Or go to bed hungry if it happened we must;
And of chances for riding we were wholly bereft,
Unless some stray farmer might give us a lift.
Our Prospero has come with his magical staff,
And into crisp bank notes converted our chaff,
And now we've our dollars all by the saddle,
And behind-spanking bays in our own coach we ride,
While, instead of contriving on stale lunches to live,
In our goodly stone mansions grand dinners we give.
Thus the virtue of a generous nature is shown,
And at last "ye poor actor" has come by his own.

.....This man we are going to tell you about is named John Brown, but not the Brown who's body lies a mouldering in the tomb. He is of the lobby sort, always mixing in where he has no business, and shouldn't poke if they say anything to him. Not long ago William Jamison was exhibiting a "Panorama of the war in France at a cost of ten thousand dollars," as the bills kindly informed us. By some means or other only known to this prevail.....When gentlemen "rise to explain," between acts, they should not mix their liquors—with onions, as the combined fragrance is not pleasant to those near them.....Isn't it a little singular that Frank Kerns and Johnny Queen bloom best as "Morning Glories" during the night?.....There is not a particle of truth in the rumor that O'Baldwin, the Irish giant, is the author of "Love me Little, Love me Long." Another lie nailed, as the political organs say.....'Our Jim" makes a somethe-political organs say.....'Our Jim" makes a something that will not hold all the people who seek admittance. He thinks not hold all the people who seek admittance. He thinks the overflow might be kept—for another night—on ice..... The lady who "would not dye in spring time" has been compelled to change her mind since the early frosts have compelled to change her mind since the early frosts have compelled to attribute to her all those accomplishments which are derivable only from long study and practice. Her strong point is her naturalness, with which spirit she magnetizes others, insomuch that what transpires during the progress of this comedy might (as it does) transpire every day life. The Vicomte De Thonnery is wedded to a young and charming woman, whose chief pleasure in life is the promotion of her husband's happiness, but he, like many others of whom he is the prototype, having once secured his treasure, becomes infatuated with the society of convivial friends, and seeks consolation in the society of an actress—Stella, premiere danseuse at the grand opera. This role, assigned to Miss Phillis Glover, was respectably performed, but might have been assigned to an actress of much higher grade, requiring, as it does, vivacity, esprit, that certain je ne scais quoi which the French term abandon, while conveying no imputation of immorality, Stella being simply a type of a class who live behind the footlights only, who receive scores of bouquets and scented billet doux from men of whose motives they are thoroughly aware, and who, except in a general sense, are indifferent to all admirers. It is customary to speak of stage realism as coupled only with upholstery and scenic effect, but in the performance of such parts as Agnes, Stella, the Vicomte, etc., the realism truly lies. Agnes, the wife, faithful through all the vicissitudes, unceasingly follows and endeavors to reclaim her errant lord, Stella, the soubrette, seeking proving too strong for him, he still evades her, still deceives her, still follows the Lurlei that is leading him to his ruin. We conceive that (with that practice which alone makes perfect) no woman can excel Miss Ethel in passages displaying tenderness and natural emotion, but she is yet very young, and requires, above all, study and patience. Just at the time when the worthless Vicomte, by all the laws of common sense, should have committed suicide, and is about, in the frenzy of a newly awakened jealousy, to kill his wife and supposed rival, (who turns out to be his brother-in-law, Raphael,)the tricks employed to effect his regeneration are revealed, and he is taken back to the home and hearth of her whom he has so persistently betrayed. Mr. D. H. Harkins, as the Vicomte, gives his audience a faithful rendition of a character that is only too common in Parisian life. Mr. Welsh Edwards was an effective Bonnardin. Mr. Ed. Lamb, as Marc Antoine Narcisse Milledeurs, was very amusing, but should bear in mind that vraisemblance in personation should not prevent a judicious use of the lungs. His share in the mad-house scene, at the end of the fourth act, creates the only spontaneous outburst of applause that is elicited, except by occasional flashes in the parts of Miss Ethel and Mr. Harkins. Mr. H. Montgomery's Oracowitch (a sort of Mephistophiles to the Vicomte) fulfilled all reasonable expectations. Except to readers and thinkers, this comedy might be pronounced tame, yet it is of a higher order of merit than is usually to be found upon theatrical boards. "Agnes" is well put upon the stage, every scene, in point of upholstery and setting, being the model of perfection. The interior of this theatre has been improved, until it constitutes one of the most attractive and beautiful resorts in the city. We append the cast of "Agnes."

CHARLEY SHAY'S OPERA HOUSE, formerly the Thirty-fourth Street Theatre, was opened on Monday evening, Sept. 30th, after an entire change by an efficient orchestra of nine people, a carnival scene was presented, during which Messrs. Gleason, Goodyear, Whiting, Buckley and Clifford performed the "Hong Kong Dance;" Charley Shay, feats of juggling and balancing; Mons. de Chalamen, a "Ching Chang Dance;" Charley Shay, a comic steeple dance, and Miss Minnie Jackson, appropriately costumed as the Goddess of Liberty, sang "The Star Spangled Banner." During that act, on either side and at the back of the stage, were persons clad in Chinese costumes, holding banners, from the top of each of which, suspended upon wires, depended three illuminated Chinese lanterns of various colors; and, during the singing of the national song, upon these banners appeared portraits of Washington, Greeley, Grant, Sherman, Scott, Douglass and Lincoln. Charles Gleason sang songs with banjo obligato, and interspersed witticisms, which were fairly rendered. The Leopar brothers, John and Henry, followed in hat spinning and acrobatic feats, which deserve creditable mention; later in the evening they won considerable favor by their performances upon the horizontal bar. George Thatcher made his metropolitan debut in a characteristic Negro song, called "Old Black Joe," and in response to the first encore of the evening, gave, with excellent effect, "Buy a Box of Blacking from Poor Uncle Ben." He has a resonant bass voice, and an excellent performer. Goodyear and Whiting per:ormed a double clog dance, which was noticeable for excellence of time, and was encored; and later in the evening a double song and dance called "I Love You." Miss Martha Wren and James Collins performed "Barney's Courtship" in a manner that was fully up to their usual standard of excellence. They have introduced therein "Paddy Miles' Boots," and it will soon be sung by Collins. They were recalled at the close of the act. George Buckley, another first appearance, performed upon a variety of musical instruments correctly, and with considerable taste. Charley Shay then introduced his trained dog, Fanny, which evinced a remarkable degree of docility, and is quite clever, being well performed. Hughey Haggerty, who appeared to be a great favorite with the audience, sang Dutch songs which evoked considerable applause. An old time Ethiopian sketch, called "Too Much Discipline," and a burlesque and pantomime called "Blue Beard," performed by the principal members of the company, closed the programme. In the pantomime portion thereof Charley Shay was the clown, William Goodyear the pantaloon, Mons. de Chalamen, harlequin, and Miss Ernestine Follett, columbine. Business thus far has not been particularly encouraging, but, as the company is a good one, it is to be hoped that we may have the pleasure of reporting an increased attendance. The house has hitherto been nicely managed, and having been closed of late, some little repairs necessarily elapse ere the denizens of that portion of the city will patronize it.

J. H. O'NEIL, Miss Maggie Delmar, Miss Annie Delmar, little Delmar, and L. W. Harleigh, commenced an engagement at the Bowery Theatre on Monday evening, Sept. 30th, in a drama, written by L. W. Harleigh, entitled "Eph; or, Before the Amendment." The drama is faulty in construction, the incidents lack novelty, and the dialogue is common place. It may be considered simply as a vehicle for the introduction of Ethiopian specialties, which, however, possessed little merit. The music, songs and dances, and choruses, were familiar to the public many years since, and it was thought that their revival would aid the success of the drama. In the first chorus, sung by some fifteen persons, the singers could not beat the voices above the accompaniment of the band. Later in the evening, however, this defect was partially remedied. Mr. O'Neil displayed no special merit, either in the acting of Eph or in his musical performances. On the evening that we attended, Wednesday, but one of the Misses Delmar appeared. She only sang one verse of a song and performed a brief dance, which did not meet with favor, the lady being evidently a novice. Little Delmar, a boy of tender years, performed several songs and dances and a jig. In the former his enunciation was so indistinct that the words could not be understood. He gained some applause from the genius of the gallery for his jig dancing, but his performance was not up to the standard of the infant prodigies now before the public. L. W. Harleigh performed a banjo solo and sang a song with banjo obligato, which merited no special commendation. We cannot conscientiously pronounce either the drama or the performances of the "stars" successful. Little scope for acting was afforded the stock company, the respective parts of which lacked consistency sufficiently to aid the success of the performances. The average attendance was only fair. During the first four evenings of the week the drama was preceded by "California Diamonds," and followed by "Jaques Strop." On Friday evening, for the benefit of Mr. O'Niel, in addition to the drama, he appeared in Irish eccentricities, and Miss Foster's "New York Burglars" closed the performances. On Saturday evening, for the benefit of little Delmar and L. W. Harleigh, the programme of Friday was repeated. This evening, Oct. 7th, C. Harry Franck commences an engagement in a sensational drama, entitled "Cagliostro; or, the Scarlet Demon."

KITTIE ROY, jig dancer; Blanche Selwyn, change artist, and Miss Jackson commence an engagement at White's Athenæum on Oct. 14th, and Annie Hindle on the 28th.

THE OLYMPIC THEATRE, which is now being renovated and re-decorated, is to re-open on Monday evening, Oct. 14th, with M'lle Marie Aimee and her opera bouffe company, in "La Grande Duchesse."

MADAME LUCCA made her American debut at the Academy of Music, on Monday night, Sept. 30th, as Selika, in "L'Africaine." The house was crowded in every part, for the little songster and her wonderful achievements" have been worked up in orthodox manner, and there was considerable curiosity to see and hear the new comer. She does not seem to have come up to expectations, however, and her Selika was somewhat of a disappointm ent to those who "read up" the sketches of her life and musical abilities. Signor Brugnedo, also new to our boards, assumed the role of Vasco di Gama, but he failed to awaken any enthusiasm, and may be set down as a fair second rater. M. Jamet was the Don Pedro, and Jemmy met with much favor in the part. Moriami's Nelusko, and Madame Leoni Lavielle's Inez were well rendered. The chorus was mediocre, and the scenery has seen better days. "Faust" was presented on Wednesday evening, Oct. 2d, and on Friday evening, Oct. 4th, when Miss Kellogg made her rentree, "La Traviata" was given. Scarcely any previous notice was made of this lady's appearance, everything being sacrificed so that Lucca should have a hearty welcome, but the Kellogg attracted a large audience, and was not "see back" when contrasted with the foreigner. "L'Africaine" was repeated at the matinee on Saturday.

COL. T. A. BROWN, dramatic agent, 118 Broadway, is prepared to negotiate engagements for the following artists:—Johanna Pritchard, for star engagements with her own drama "Auramania;" Ettie Henderson, who can be secured for six or twelve nights after Nov. 22d, for the production of "Far West" and "Lena, the Street Singer;" Laura Keene, for her costume recitals; Betty and Emily Rigl, danseuses; M'lle Cerito, danseuse; Patty Rosa, vocalist; Ella Wren, for leading business; Prof. Zaulig, musical director. He also has two plays for sale, and advertises for variety talent.

JAMES ANTHONY FROUDE, the English historian, is to deliver the first of a series of lectures at Association Hall on Oct. 16th, that occasion being his first public appearance in America.

THE sixth week of the performance of "Diamonds" at the Fifth Avenue Theatre will be the present. Signs of coming change in the programme are visible in the underlined announcement upon the bills that several of the old comedies are in active preparation for early revival. The average business continues good.

SARDOU'S NEW COMEDY, "Agnes," was repeated last week at the Union Square Theatre, to what must have been regarded, by lovers of the legitimate, as a very discriminating audience, since there was but little demonstration of applause throughout. Sardou's newest production is evidently misunderstood. It is a finely wrought work of art. Yet it is but a "closet play," more effective in the reading than in the acting, and that Miss Agnes Ethel has succeeded in attracting attention in a part which relies strictly upon its own merits, and has none of the sensational accessories to support it, is very strong testimony in her favor, although we are disposed to reprobate as injurious to the actress the course of those journalists who seem disposed to attribute to her all those accomplishments which are derivable only from long study and practice. Her strong point is her naturalness, with which spirit she magnetizes others, insomuch that what transpires during the progress of this comedy might (as it does) transpire every day life. The Vicomte De Thonnery is wedded to a young and charming woman, whose chief pleasure in life is the promotion of her husband's happiness, but he, like many others of whom he is the prototype, having once secured his treasure, becomes infatuated with the society of convivial friends, and seeks consolation in the society of an actress—Stella, premiere danseuse at the grand opera. This role, assigned to Miss Phillis Glover, was respectably performed, but might have been assigned to an actress of much higher grade, requiring, as it does, vivacity, esprit, that certain je ne scais quoi which the French term abandon, while conveying no imputation of immorality, Stella being simply a type of a class who live behind the footlights only, who receive scores of bouquets and scented billet doux from men of whose motives they are thoroughly aware, and who, except in a general sense, are indifferent to all admirers. It is customary to speak of stage realism as coupled only with upholstery and scenic effect, but in the performance of such parts as Agnes, Stella, the Vicomte, etc., the realism truly lies. Agnes, the wife, faithful through all the vicissitudes, unceasingly follows and endeavors to reclaim her errant lord, Stella, the soubrette, seeking proving too strong for him, he still evades her, still deceives her, still follows the Lurlei that is leading him to his ruin. We conceive that (with that practice which alone makes perfect) no woman can excel Miss Ethel in passages displaying tenderness and natural emotion, but she is yet very young, and requires, above all, study and patience. Just at the time when the worthless Vicomte, by all the laws of common sense, should have committed suicide, and is about, in the frenzy of a newly awakened jealousy, to kill his wife and supposed rival, (who turns out to be his brother-in-law, Raphael,)the tricks employed to effect his regeneration are revealed, and he is taken back to the home and hearth of her whom he has so persistently betrayed. WILLIAM J. FLORENCE having purchased of Theodore Michaelis the sole right for the United States of Louis Leroy's play, "Le Cousin Jacques," he has translated, adapted, and copyrighted it, under the title of "Cousin Jack." He has also sold to Mr. A. M. Palmer, manager of the Union Square Theatre, the exclusive right to represent the play in this city, as will be seen by a notice to that effect published in another column.

COUNTRIGHT AND GILBERT, double song and dance performers and grotesque dancers, made their first appearance in this city at White's Athenæum on Sept. 30th. They have good voices, and their musical efforts were above the average of song and dance performers, but it is in their dancing that they excel. They performed an act entitled "Big and Little," which expressed the appearance of the performers. They were both clad in black tights, black coats having a white binding of some two inches in width, pearl hats with wide black bands, large standing collars and long pointed shoes. Their dancing, which is of the Mallifon and Voke family school, language is inadequate to describe. For suppleness, agility and grotesque contortions of the nether limbs, they have never been surpassed, if equalled, by any artists who have hitherto appeared here. The re-appearance of J. C. Stewart, who is one of the best actors upon the variety stage, was a notable feature. He acted in two of his own sketches, which were received with favor. Richardo, the male soprano, now in his fourth week, continues to meet with favor, and the minstrel first part is thoroughly enjoyable. The attendance has been good.

THE ONLY FAULT with the Theatre Comique is that the auditorium is not large enough to accommodate all those who apply for admission. On several evenings during the past week such proved to be the case. Although there were no fresh appearances, a pleasing programme was offered. Specialties by Mlle Rita Saunders, Healy and Conway, and Miss Carrie Haines. The Romellis were the recipients of much applause in their gymnastic specialties, displaying considerable grace and a large amount of dexterity. Healy, Conway and Miss Rita Saunders appeared to advantage in a neat triple clog dance, the songs and dances of the first two above mentioned be'ng also loudly applauded. Miss Rita Saunders made her re-appearance in a new ballet by George W. Smith, entitled "The Silver Sprites," which proved, if possible, more attractive than any of its predecessors. The other most prominent features of a lengthy programme were the acrobatic act of Bunz and Curry, Ling Look and Yamadiwa in their specialties, Turner and Lester's capital songs and dances, the serio-comic vocalism of Miss Lucy Adams, and the pantomime of "Pongo," which wound up the evening's entertainment. This week Frank Dillon, versatile comique, puts in an appearance, and George White makes his appearance. Max Walhalla, gymnast, also makes his bow. The pantomime of "Pongo," notwithstanding its great success, gives place this week to the "Red Gnome," which will be produced under the direction of Alex. Zanfretta.

AFTER ONE WEEK'S run to good houses at the play her abilities in any degree. The dancing of Signorina Teresa Antonino, which was introduced in the second and third acts, was noticeable for its entire freedom from angularity, and for its extreme grace and easiness. Prof. Lagrenia, who also appeared, together with his trained birds, afforded much gratification to the audiences. The scenery was specially prepared for this production and deserves praise. Mrs. D. P. Bowers and company are announced for Oct. 7th, the Holman Opera Troupe for the 14th, and Miss Charlotte Thompson and company for the 21st.

OUR DRAMATIC AFFAIRS IN Boston we are advised as follows by our correspondent, under date of Oct. 6th:—

"The Lydia Thompson burlesque troupe made their first public appearance on the stage of the Globe Theatre on Monday evening, 30th ult., in the 'Happy Pair' and 'Ixion.' In the first piece, two applicants for public favor, Miss Rose Coghlan and Mr. Edmund Leathes, made their début in Boston. Miss Coghlan is exceedingly pretty, a tasteful dresser and an excellent actress, and the impression she made was decidedly in her favor. Mr. Leathes was also well received, playing his part with care and effect. In 'Ixion,' Miss Coghlan again appeared to advantage as Jupiter, rendering her impersonation as any burlesque actress we have yet seen. Lydia Thompson was warmly greeted on her appearance, as was Eliza Weatherby, who is a great favorite in Boston. Amy Sheridan made her first appearance, and in personality, musical ability is decidedly not an acquisition. She is too tall by half, and neither her face nor her accomplishments make up for this disadvantage. All the old favorites—Carlotta Addison, Camille Dubois, Harry Beckett, Willie Edouin, Tilly Earle—came in for their share of applause, and all played excellently. But 'Ixion' —an old piece, and has lost its attraction apparently, as it was withdrawn after Wednesday, and 'Sinbad' substituted for the balance of the week. This is a strong piece, is full of pretty songs and funny doings and sayings, and always draws. The cast was pretty much the same as when first produced here a year ago, the only exceptions being in the roles of Fairman and Sindar, now played by Amy Sheridan and Fannie Leslie. The latter deserves a word of mention for her very excellent dancing. Taking a small part, her name at the end of the bills, with nothing to call attention to her save her own abilities, she has succeeded every evening, without exception, in obtaining an enthusiastic encore. Willie Edouin's Corporal Long Song and Heathen Chinee are immense as ever, and the entire company has gone excellently well. Business has been good, the houses being quite large throughout the week. To-morrow night, 7th, the new burlesque of 'Kentilworth,' adapted and arranged especially for this troupe by H. B. Murdock of the Boston Theatre, will receive its first performance in this city. 'Robin Hood' and 'King Carrott' are underlined for early production. The regular company were announced to perform in 'Speed the Plough,' in Lynn, Oct. 2d; Taunton, Oct. 3d; Chelsea, Oct. 4th; North Bridgewater, Oct. 5th. On Tuesday next, Carlotta Leclercq joins them, and 'The Lady of Lyons' and 'Corporal Lacosta' will be played at New Haven, Oct. 8th; Hartford, Oct. 9th; Springfield, Oct. 11th; Worcester, Oct. 12th; Lowell, Oct. 14th; Salem, Oct. 15th; Lynn, Oct. 16th; Chelsea, Oct. 18th. Leclercq opens an engagement at the Globe on or about Dec. 9th.....Chanfrau has been so very successful in 'Kit,' and the houses have been so large that Lester Wallack's engagement has been postponed a week, in order that people may have further opportunities for witnessing the 'Arkansas Traveler.' This is, however, positively the only respite we are to have, as both Chanfrau and 'Kit' open in Baltimore, on the 16th inst., and Wallack, with Effie Germon, opens here in 'Rosedale.'.....At the Museum, the fifth week of the comedy season has seen no falling off in the size of the audiences, the house being completely packed in every performance. Caught in the Rain' and 'Our Philicodly,' were done on Monday, and the 'Rivals,' 'Bold Stroke for a Husband,' 'Doing for the Best, 'Ray Blas' and 'The Inquisitive Darkey,' have served to fill out the balance of the week. To-morrow, 7th, 'Mr. Waltrop's Boarders' and 'Somebody Else;' Tuesday, 'Caste;' Wednesday, 'The Serious Family' and the 'Irish Emigrant;' Thursday, 'My Uncle's Will' and 'Sweethearts and Wives;' and Saturday, 'Camille,' are the announcements for the coming week. On Oct. 14th the long expected 'Wild Oats' will be brought out, with new scenery and new costumes, all especially made for this special piece. A good engagement is that of Griffin at the St. James the past week has been in the production, for the first time in Boston, of 'Shin Fane,' with the Irish comedian, T. G. Riggs, as the hero, Bull Gair. Mr. Riggs assumes five different characters with considerable ability, has a tolerable amount of native humor, and is quite strong in exciting situations. The play is from the pen of John F. Poole, and is by no means a bad one, the dialogue being better than the average in plays of the class, and the situations well wrought up and very effective. The audiences have been somewhat larger than usual, but not by any means large. 'Shin Fane' was played for the last time on Saturday, and to-morrow, 7th, Mrs G. C. Howard will appear as Topsy, in 'Uncle Tom's Cabin.' G. C. Howard will play St. Clair, and little Portia Albee is announced for Eva. 'Peep o' Day' is said to be in preparation."

"RIP VAN WINKLE," with Robert McWade in the title role, was acted at the Opera House, Rochester, N. Y., during the past week, to good business. New scenery was painted expressly therefor by Leon H. Lempert, which does him credit, and it was acted in an excellent manner. Mrs. F. S. Chanfrau appears Oct. 7th, in "Dora."

MISS MARIETTA RAVEL commenced a five nights' engagement at Halifax, N. S., on Oct. 1st.

THE ABBOTT-KIRALFY PANTOMIME TROUPE begin an engagement at Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 7th.

LEO HUDSON advertises that she can be engaged for one or two weeks.

EVA WEST, soubrette, is at liberty to accept engagements. Address her as per advertisement.

MARIAN TAYLOR, burlesque actress and comedienne, can be addressed as per advertisement.

A BUSINESS MANAGER, who has had twenty years' experience, advertises for an engagement. See B. M.'s card elsewhere.

DOLLIE BIDWELL opened a week's engagement at the Griswold Opera House, Troy, N. Y., on Sept. 30th, in "Nobody's Daughter," and during the week appeared in "The Hidden Hand" and "The French Spy." Our correspondent reviews her performances as follows, writing on the 15th:—"Her engagement, both artistically and pecuniarly considered, was not a success. She is a remarkably fine looking lady on the stage, and a most elegant dresser; in fact, she wore some of the richest costumes during the week ever seen on the Troy stage. Phœnix Hose Co., No. 1, of Poughkeepsie, guests of the Hugh Rankin Steamer while in the city, attended the Opera House on the 1st, having received an invitation from Mrs. Waller. On the 3d there was no performance at the Opera House, as it was engaged on that evening to the democrats and liberal republicans, with Carl Schurz as the star—he, however, failed to connect, and the party were out $275, the sum paid Mrs. Waller in advance for the use of the Opera House. Mr. W. S. Higgins, with his new drama, 'Out of the Fire,' is the attraction, commencing on the 7th. Robert McWade follows on the 14th with 'Rip Van Winkle.'"

AMUSEMENTS IN PORTLAND, Oregon, and vicinity, are thus described by an occasional correspondent, writing on Sept. 30th:—"Gen. B. Wallon, after a short but successful season, at the Oro Fino Theatre, has gone to Salem, where he will remain during the continuance of the State Fair. He will then return and open for the regular season. Among his troupe are to be found Mrs. C. E. Stewart, J. H. Vinson, Rob Crosbie, Rob Fuilford and wife, Minnie Pixley and others. George Intendo doing the 'legitimate-en-ba-roun.' 'Humpty Dumpty' was produced at the Oro Fino Theatre Sept. 25th, to an overwhelming house. The tricks are all new, and will, for the size of Portland and her theatre, compare favorably with that brought out by G. L. Fox, my old friend. In the cast Ed. Montague makes a really excellent clown, Lipsis a good pantaloon, Mlle. Gerreita (ida St. Clair) a fine pleasing Columbine, and Madame Gaugani a not-to-be-equalled harlequin."

SAWTELLE'S DRAMATIC CONSTELLATION, with Miss Nellie Boyd as the stellar attraction, opened at Fairfield, Ia., Sept. 30th, for one week, doing a large business. The company is re-organized, and is now said to contain some of the best theatrical talent in the west. They open in Ottumwa, Oct. 6th, for one week. A good first low comedian, first old woman, juvenile man and juvenile lady are wanted. Address as per advertisement.

DRAMATIC AFFAIRS IN CHICAGO, ILL., are reported as follows by our correspondent, who wrote on Oct. 3d:—"'Saratoga' was withdrawn from the boards at McVicker's Theatre on Sept. 28th, to make room for the new play entitled 'The Rogue's March,' which was brought to light for the first time on the 30th. The play was written for this theatre by Mr. Young, formerly a Chicago journalist, now residing at Monmouth, Ill. The play is illustrative of California life, and is comprised in a prologue and three acts. The habitat of the plot is in a mining region of California. Major Gideon, the rogue of the play, is a 'bummer' of the Eccles type, who has expelled from the village of Stony Gulch by a vigilance committee. His daughter Dolly, who is left behind, is taken care of by the widow Halliohn, who brings up the little waif. As Dolly grows to beautiful womanhood an attachment arises between herself and young John Halliohn, a good hearted but dissipated youth, who frequents the saloon and gaming table of Esau. Dolly learns that John is in debt to Esau, raises the money to cancel the obligation, and as he is thanking her in a most tender manner, the widow appears upon the scene, and, becoming aware of their attachment, she grows terribly jealous. Gideon, the rogue, steps in and by his skill is enabled by John, who gives him the money received from Dolly to depart. Gideon goes to the gambling room, becomes drunk, and is robbed; John appears on the scene and insists on having Gideon ejected into the street; John takes a hand at the cards, loses all his money, as well as the title to his property; Dolly enters and entreats him to go home; he refuses, and the scene ends in a general melee. Gideon and Esau are again wanderers, Esau having won back all of the property that John is cheated out of, and finally winds up by killing Esau. John is suspected of having committed the deed, is arrested and about to be marched off, when Gideon appears and acknowledges himself as the guilty one. John is discharged, released, the marriage takes place, and Gideon is marched off to the tune of 'The Rogue's March.' Of the merits of the play little can be said in its favor; the prologue is rather weak and tedious; the language is too common-place and covers too much ground. The second and third acts are well worked up, and are a decided improvement upon the prologue, but still there is something lacking to make the production complete. Mr. McVicker's conception of Major Gideon is correct, and is in every way in accordance with the author's idea of what the character should be; his make-up and acting plainly showed that he had studied the part closely. John Halliohn has a good representative in John O'Neil. Chas. Stanley acted well the part of Esau; Solomon Hoon was finely illustrated by Ed. Barry; Mary Myers appeared to pleasing advantage as Dolly, as did Mrs. Stoneall as Widow Halliohn. The play is magnificently mounted; the scene of Stony Gulch Hollow, in the prologue, and the mountain and exterior of the Miners' Home, in the third act, are really beautiful. The attendance has thus far averaged fair.....Tony Denier appeared at the Academy of Music in the well-known pantomime of 'Humpty Dumpty' on September 30th, and was welcomed by an audience that packed the auditorium in every portion. With one exception, that of J. K. Emmett, the attendance has been larger than at any time since the opening, notwithstanding the extra counter attractions at other places. Mr. Denier as 'Humpty Dumpty' nightly convulses the large audience with laughter by his clownish frolics. He is admirably supported by Joe. M. Sloan as pantaloon. Mr. A. W. Mafin makes a very acceptable harlequin, while Mlle. Linda de Rhona makes a charming columbine. Katie Wilson and Ed. Marble are alike creditable as Burlesque and New Jersey. During the fair scene Miss Jennie Morgan sings a selected ballad in a superior manner. She possesses a remarkably sweet voice, which she uses to good advantage. The management have mounted the piece in good shape, the tricks are working meely, and altogether 'Humpty Dumpty' will be a success. Mr. Denier remains another week and will be succeeded on the 14th by Miss Ada Gray.....The Academy company is playing in Oshkosh, Wis., to good business. They play in Green Bay the 7th and 8th, Fond du Lac the 9th and 10th, and Madison 11th and 12th.....Aiken's Theatre will be inaugurated on the 7th by a concert by Theodore' Thomas Orchestra."

AT THE ROYAL LYCEUM, Toronto, Ont., "Divorce," after a run of two weeks, was withdrawn on Sept. 28th. "The Romance of a Poor Young Man" was acted on the 30th, and two following evenings, the chief feature of which was the manual of Frank Tannehill. In consequence of the sudden indisposition of Blanche Bradshaw, her role, Margeurite, was assumed on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings by Miss Lottie Ward, who costumed and acted the part very nicely indeed. The attraction on Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings, consisted of "Married Life." Miss Connie Thompson has severed her connection with this establishment; her departure is much to be regretted, as she had made herself a great favorite during her short stay there. Monday, Oct. 7th, G. W. Garrison makes his first appearance as Capt. Murphy Maguire in "The Serious Family." "Intrigue" is announced for early production.

MR. C. W. COULDOCK commenced a week's engagement at the Pittsburgh, Pa., Opera House on Sept. 30th, opening as Lord Fielding in "The Willow Copse," before one of the largest audiences of the season. On the 1st inst. "The Chimney Corner" was presented, with Mr. Couldock as Peter Probity. "The Willow Copse" was reproduced on the 2d, and on the 3d "Old Phil's Birthday" and "Milky White" constituted the bill, with Mr. Couldock as Phil. Stapleton and Milky White. Business averaged good. For the benefit of Mr. Couldock on the 4th, "King Henry IV" was announced, the beneficiaire appearing as Falstaff. The "Lancashire Lass," on the 5th, concluded Mr. Couldock's engagement. Lawrence Barrett opens on the 7th inst. in "Rosedale."

MAGGIE MITCHELL, under the management of Ben. Lowell, appeared at Manchester, N. H., Sept. 30th, to a large house. This week she will be at Springfield, Mass., Oct. 9th; Albany, N. Y., 10th; Syracuse, 11th and 12th, thence to Rochester, 14th, 15th and 16th; Auburn, 17th, and Utica, 18th and 19th.

LINGARD'S COMEDY COMPANY appeared at Manchester, N. H., Oct. 1st, to good business. They are billed for Poughkeepsie, N. Y., 14th and 15th; Hudson, 16th; Newburgh, 17th; Norwalk, Conn., 18th; Bridgeport, 19th; Brooklyn, N. Y., 21st; Newark, N. J., 22d; New Brunswick, 23d; Trenton, 24th; Easton, Pa., 25th, and Allentown, 26th.

J. HOLMES GROVER, who is at present playing in "I. O. U." at Wood's Museum, Philadelphia, Pa., can be addressed as per advertisement by managers desiring to engage him for vacant dates.

AGNES WALLACH AND SAM B. VILLA have engaged the following artists to support them during the coming season:—Monica Newman, soubrette; Sabra Denison, Lizzie Newman, Ada Harcourt, H. A. Darley, Wm. Sharpley, Charles Gardiner, Frank Edwards, John Howard and Lewis Price. The members of the company are requested, through a card elsewhere, to assemble for rehearsal at Milford, Mass., on Oct. 16th.

THE ATTENDANCE at the Academy of Music, Cleveland, O., has been quite light to witness Mr. John Collins, the Irish comedian, who opened on Sept. 30th, in "Rory O'More." "The Nervous Man and the Man of Nerve" was given on Oct. 1st, and the "Irish Attorney" and the farce of "How to Pay the Rent," on the 2d. The support rendered by the stock company compared favorably with former productions in the comedy line. "The Colleen Bawn" constituted the bill on the 3d, in which the Danny Man of Mr. Harold Forsburg was the best made-up and acted part of the play. "Paul Clifford" was presented on the 4th, for the benefit bill. For the matinée on the 5th, "The Colleen Bawn" was announced. Saturday night, "Paul Clifford" and "Rory O'More," to wind up Mr. Collins' engagement. The management, we learn, have done away with Wednesday matinees. Miss Lillie Eldridge opens on the 7th, in "Mignon."

MAXWELL'S BROADWAY THEATRE COMPANY commenced a week's season at Danbury, Conn., Sept. 30th, and are to perform at Lee, Mass., one week, commencing Oct. 7th.

THE MEMORIAL BENEFIT to the family of the late Thomas C. Hughes, of Jersey City, given by John Jack and Miss Annie Firmin, supported by a dramatic company in "John Garth," netted about $200. On the following evening these artists made their farewell appearance, acting in a drama called "A Wife of Two."

MAY CHAPMAN, one of the old and well known Chapman family, who has figured extensively, for the past thirty years, as a premiere danseuse, and lately as a pedestrienne, is in Portland, Oregon, having retired from public life.

THE ALLBONARIANS, vocalists and Swiss bell players, who have a column advertisement in this issue of the CLIPPER, are said to be meeting with great success throughout the western states. They have added a staff of silver bells to their stock, and their usual selections of vocalisms are now supplemented by performances on them. Mr. Waldron, the manager, has by his tact, earned for himself and the troupe an extensive reputation, and wherever they perform they are generally well spoken of by the press.

JOHN TEMPLETON'S ENGLISH OPERA COMPANY performed at Atlanta, Ga., during the past week, and are billed to open in Savannah, Ga., Oct. 7th, to remain until the 12th, inclusive.

TUTTI, who can be addressed care of this office, wants an engagement as flute player.

THE BARNABEE CONCERT TROUPE appeared in concert at Wieting Opera House, Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 1st, concerning which our correspondent wrote, on Oct. 6th, as follows:—"There was quite a limited audience present, owing to the fact that the company was not well known in this section. The entertainment throughout was the best of the kind that has been presented to a Syracuse audience in a long time. Mr. Barnabee has a good bass voice, and sings the compositions of the best composers well; his chief success, however, is in comic singing. The ballad, 'Two Locks,' and the encore song that he sang in response to the storm of applause, as was Eliza Weatherby, who is a great favorite in Boston. Amy Sheridan made her first appearance, and in personality, musical ability is decidedly not an acquisition. She is too tall by half, and neither her face nor her accomplishments make up for this disadvantage. All the old favorites—Carlotta Addison, Camille Dubois, Harry Beckett, Willie Edouin, Tilly Earle—came in for their share of applause, and all played excellently. But 'Ixion' —an old piece, and has lost its attraction apparently, as it was withdrawn after Wednesday, and 'Sinbad' substituted for the balance of the week. This is a strong piece, is full of pretty songs and funny doings and sayings, and always draws. The cast was pretty much the same as when first produced here a year ago, the only exceptions being in the roles of Fairman and Sindar, now played by Amy Sheridan and Fannie Leslie. The latter deserves a word of mention for her very excellent dancing. Taking a small part, her name at the end of the bills, with nothing to call attention to her save her own abilities, she has succeeded every evening, without exception, in obtaining an enthusiastic encore. Willie Edouin's Corporal Long Song and Heathen Chinee are immense as ever, and the entire company has gone excellently well. Business has been good, the houses being quite large throughout the week. To-morrow night, 7th, the new burlesque of 'Kentilworth,' adapted and arranged especially for this troupe by H. B. Murdock of the Boston Theatre, will receive its first performance in this city. 'Robin Hood' and 'King Carrott' are underlined for early production. The regular company were announced to perform in 'Speed the Plough,' in Lynn, Oct. 2d; Taunton, Oct. 3d; Chelsea, Oct. 4th; North Bridgewater, Oct. 5th. On Tuesday next, Carlotta Leclercq joins them, and 'The Lady of Lyons' and 'Corporal Lacosta' will be played at New Haven, Oct. 8th; Hartford, Oct. 9th; Springfield, Oct. 11th; Worcester, Oct. 12th; Lowell, Oct. 14th; Salem, Oct. 15th; Lynn, Oct. 16th; Chelsea, Oct. 18th. Leclercq opens an engagement at the Globe on or about Dec. 9th.....Chanfrau has been so very successful in 'Kit,' and the houses have been so large that Lester Wallack's engagement has been postponed a week, in order that people may have further opportunities for witnessing the 'Arkansas Traveler.' This is, however, positively the only respite we are to have, as both Chanfrau and 'Kit' open in Baltimore, on the 16th inst., and Wallack, with Effie Germon, opens here in 'Rosedale.'.....At the Museum, the fifth week of the comedy season has seen no falling off in the size of the audiences, the house being completely packed in every performance. 'Caught in the Rain' and 'Our Philicodly,' were done on Monday, and the 'Rivals,' 'Bold Stroke for a Husband,' 'Doing for the Best, 'Ray Blas' and 'The Inquisitive Darkey,' have served to fill out the balance of the week. To-morrow, 7th, 'Mr. Waltrop's Boarders' and 'Somebody Else;' Tuesday, 'Caste;' Wednesday, 'The Serious Family' and the 'Irish Emigrant;' Thursday, 'My Uncle's Will' and 'Sweethearts and Wives;' and Saturday, 'Camille,' are the announcements for the coming week. On Oct. 14th the long expected 'Wild Oats' will be brought out, with new scenery and new costumes, all especially made for this special piece. A good engagement is that of Griffin at the St. James the past week has been in the production, for the first time in Boston, of 'Shin Fane,' with the Irish comedian, T. G. Riggs, as the hero, Bull Gair. Mr. Riggs assumes five different characters with considerable ability, has a tolerable amount of native humor, and is quite strong in exciting situations. The play is from the pen of John F. Poole, and is by no means a bad one, the dialogue being better than the average in plays of the class, and the situations well wrought up and very effective. The audiences have been somewhat larger than usual, but not by any means large. 'Shin Fane' was played for the last time on Saturday, and to-morrow, 7th, Mrs G. C. Howard will appear as Topsy, in 'Uncle Tom's Cabin.' G. C. Howard will play St. Clair, and little Portia Albee is announced for Eva. 'Peep o' Day' is said to be in preparation."

"RIP VAN WINKLE," with Robert McWade in the title role, was acted at the Opera House, Rochester, N. Y., during the past week, to good business. New scenery was painted expressly therefor by Leon H. Lempert, which does him credit, and it was acted in an excellent manner. Mrs. F. S. Chanfrau appears Oct. 7th, in "Dora."

MISS MARIETTA RAVEL commenced a five nights' engagement at Halifax, N. S., on Oct. 1st.

THE ABBOTT-KIRALFY PANTOMIME TROUPE begin an engagement at Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 7th.

LEO HUDSON advertises that she can be engaged for one or two weeks.

EVA WEST, soubrette, is at liberty to accept engagements. Address her as per advertisement.

MARIAN TAYLOR, burlesque actress and comedienne, can be addressed as per advertisement.

Elmira Advertiser, Sept. 23d, 1872.

HARRY ROBINSON.—The troupe of minstrel men under the above management gave a good entertainment at the Opera House Saturday evening. The house was full, and considering the fact that there was another show elsewhere, the large audience must have been very gratifying to the company. The customary quartet singing in the first part was missed, but this was compensated for by the excellent choruses of the troupe. Quite a novel feature of this show is the six end men, which makes quite an innovation on the old established way of minstrels. Billy McAllister played a bone solo, with many imitations, which proved him to be very supple with his digits; he also gave the "Tyrolean Warblings" with fine effect. But the "funny business" of the show was completely outdone by Harry Robinson himself, in his sleight of hand and trapeze performances. The latter act brought down the house by the extreme ludicrousness of the thing. Take it all in all, it was a good show, and the troupe have established themselves as favorites here. They will return this way in about six months, and there are many who will be glad to see them. They are in Hornellsville this evening.

Lancaster Intelligencer, Sept. 17th, 1872.

HARRY ROBINSON'S CONCERT.—Fulton Hall was crowded last night by one of the largest audiences ever there assembled, every seat and almost every foot of standing room being occupied. It was the first visit of "The Man with the Silver Horns," as Harry is familiarly known, or his newly organized company, to our city. Everything pertaining to the performance is new and calculated to make people illustrate the philosophy of laughing and growing fat. The vast audience were kept in one continued roar from commencement to close, the surest test of enjoyment. The company is one of the very best that has ever visited us, and when they again come, as they promise to do, they will always meet with a cordial welcome.

Daily Express, Lancaster City, Pa., Sept. 17, '72

A NOVEL PARADE.—The parade of Harry Robinson's minstrel troupe, which took place yesterday afternoon at five o'clock, was quite a novel affair. The brass band belonging to the company headed the procession, and these were followed by a long line of boys, each carrying a gaily painted banner, and each banner having a single letter of the alphabet upon it, the whole spelling "Harry Robinson's Minstrels, Six End Men." It was decidedly novel and attractive, and resulted in gathering together last night one of the largest audiences we have ever seen in Fulton Hall.

Harrisburg Mercury, Sept. 19th, 1872.

ROBINSON'S MINSTRELS.—Brant's Hall was filled to its utmost capacity last night on the occasion of the first and only appearance of Harry Robinson's minstrels. Many persons, unable to obtain even standing room, went away much disappointed. The performance throughout was excellent, and gave great satisfaction. We are pleased to announce that this company is expected to visit us again in a few months.

Elmira Gazette, Sept. 23d, 1872.

HARRY ROBINSON'S MINSTRELS.—The above named troupe appeared at the Opera House Saturday evening last, and, despite the opposition of the circus, drew a large and fashionable audience. The novelty of six end men, with their songs and comicalities, was more than appreciated by the audience, and called forth rapturous applause. To say the troupe pleased their patrons is but a faint manner of expressing the satisfaction given. From the moment our citizens viewed the troupe while in procession, discoursing most harmonious music (as their band is first class), they came to the firm conclusion that there was a treat in store for them, and consequently the Opera House was more than comfortably filled. They leave for Hornellsville to-day. In conclusion we wish them good speed and a quick return to this city, where a hearty welcome awaits them.

Williamsport Standard, Sept. 21st, 1872.

HARRY ROBINSON'S MINSTRELS performed last night at the Academy of Music, to one of the largest and best pleased audiences of the season. This troupe is an excellent one, and if there is a better one traveling we have not yet seen it. There is a genuine freshness in their performances from the beginning to the end—stale jokes and half-way acting not being on their programme.

Albany Evening Times, August 27th, 1872.

'This new troupe of minstrels made their appearance last evening, at Martin Hall, and were greeted by a crowded house. The performers are twelve in number, and have a very showy uniform; black coats and pantaloons, the facing and cuffs of the coat being trimmed with orange. Their frilled shirt bosoms are immense, and their hair is dressed six inches high. The company made a good impression."

Scranton Free Press, Sept. 8th, 1872.

HARRY ROBINSON'S MINSTRELS.—This troupe gave a performance at the Opera House, last evening, to an overflowing house; in fact, the house was packed from dome to pit. The extreme heat interfered with the enjoyment of nearly everybody. The troupe is a good one, from Harry down. Carlton and Gorman being old favorites, as well as Robinson, received repeated encores. Should they visit Scranton again the Opera House will be too small to hold their audience.

Allentown Daily News, Sept. 19th, 1872.

ROBINSON'S MINSTRELS have one of the best brass bands along that ever paraded the streets of Allentown. If they can only give half as good a show as they give music, they will do as well as any minstrel show that has ever been in the Opera House.

York Trumpet, Sept. 23d, 1872.

HARRY ROBINSON'S MINSTRELS.—This popular troupe visited our town, and gave one of their amusing, entertaining and laughable concerts, at the Washington Hall, last Tuesday evening. The whole troupe proved themselves artists in their musical performances, while their caricatures were acted in the best of style, their burlesques were the most laughable, their puns and jokes were original and striking, and the dancing "bully." The hall was crowded, while the audience was largely composed of ladies. This we were pleased to see. Once our ladies of York learn to appreciate good innocent amusements, and enjoy frequent hearty laughs, instead of wearing a constant long, smileless, satanic-looking, go-to-meeting countenance, then we shall have less of those consumptive-mortgaged creatures, whose very appearance frighten young men from marriage, like death on a pale horse. Young ladies of York, throw off the false modesty and erroneous teachings of deceivers, who approach you in the name of "righteous people," and who would lead you to hell, and come out and enjoy the freedom of true christians and the blessings of the Heavenly Father.

NIXON'S AMPHITHEATRE,
CHICAGO, ILL.
This favorite and popular place of amusement has been thoroughly RENOVATED AND RE-DECORATED for the coming FALL AND WINTER SEASON.
Among the many improvements recently added to this hitherto commodious and beautiful building the following are conspicuous:—
A NEW AND EXTENSIVE STAGE has been erected, with Proscenium, Scenery, Curtains and all modern improvements, calculated for the production in FIRST CLASS STYLE of the most ELABORATE SENSATIONAL, SPECTACULAR and SHOW PIECES, with every facility and
NEW MECHANICAL APPLIANCE, superior to any place of amusement now in Chicago.
The exterior and interior arrangements of the building are UNSURPASSED FOR ELEGANCE AND COMFORT.
The illuminations of both are to the highest degree
NOVEL AND PERFECT.
The entrances and exits to and from the theatre have been entirely re-modelled, with a special view to the most rapid
RECEPTION AND EGRESS of the Largest Possible Audience.
The form of the Auditorium, modeled from the ANCIENT HIPPODROMES AND AMPHITHEATRES, offers an uninterrupted view of the stage to an audience of over 2,500 persons, and is partitioned off into Pit, Parquet, Dress Circle and Reserved Seats, and presents a beautiful appearance of ELEGANCE,
FORM AND TASTE.
The Amphitheatre is now attracting larger audiences than ALL OTHER PLACES OF AMUSEMENT COMBINED, and must undoubtedly prove the most remunerative to managers of
SPECTACULAR,
SENSATIONAL, and
SHOW PIECES,
FIRST CLASS MINSTRELS, VARIETIES
and other popular amusement enterprises.
The performances hitherto given at the Amphitheatre, comprising NIXON'S CIRCUS, MITCHELL'S ROYAL JAPS, TONY PASTOR'S TROUPE, the UNION SPY, and others, have been unexceptional in character, and the vast audiences which have attended them,
WITHOUT ONE NIGHT'S BAD BUSINESS comprised the
Best Class of People in the City of Chicago.
It is also the only place of amusement patronized to any extent by the inhabitants of the suburbs.
The manager has, under these circumstances, great pride in offering this BEAUTIFUL TEMPLE OF AMUSEMENT to managers of responsible combinations.
ONLY FIRST CLASS ONES need apply, and silence considered a negative, several hundred applications on file remaining unanswered. FOR TERMS AND TIME apply to
